New Barriers Against Reich Suggested; Wendell Willkie Hints Possible Steps

Wheeler Says U. S. Rates With Hitler For Its Acts Of Piracy

WASHINGTON, July 10—President Roosevelt's intimate circle of "fight now" advisers today are urging him to use the United States Navy immediately to seize the strategic Portuguese islands of Cape Verde and the Azores in the eastern Atlantic in order to erect new barriers against a Hitler invasion of the Americas.

Advocated by Secretary of War Stimson, Secretary of the Navy Knox and Acting Secretary of State Welles, the move would carry the U. S. flag thousands of miles across the Atlantic to the very doors of southwestern Europe and Africa. The Azores lie 1,000 miles off Portugal while the Cape Verde Islands are 481 miles off the coast of Africa.

That some such move is under presidential consideration was revealed by Wendell Willkie, the GOP presidential nominee of last year, after a personal conference with Mr. Roosevelt. On leaving the White House, Willkie said:

"The protection of Iceland in my judgment is the first step in a series of similar steps that should shortly be taken. The matter of the particular places to be occupied is a technical question on which I do not pretend to be an expert."

Without mentioning the Azores or Cape Verde, Willkie added: "If it is necessary to occupy bases in northern Ireland or even in northern Scotland, I would be in favor of that."

Plans Not Revealed

The United States Navy meanwhile cloaked its plans in complete secrecy. High officials, including Secretary Knox, said only that the Navy will carry out Mr. Roosevelt's orders—as incorporated in his message to congress on the occupation of Iceland—"that the approaches between the Americas and those strategic outposts, the safety of which this country regards as essential to its national security, and which it must therefore defend, shall remain open

27 FREIGHT CARS BLOCK BUCKEYE LAKE DISTRICT

BUCKEYE LAKE, July 10—Twenty-seven cars of a New York Central freight train jumped the track at nearby Lakeside today, blocking the Thurston-Bucyrus right-of-way and cutting off access to about 25 summer cottages. A split rail was believed responsible. The train crew escaped injury. Witnesses estimated that the coal and box cars jammed in a pile nearly 50 feet high.

MATERIALS FOR CCC CAMP BEGIN TO ARRIVE HERE

Two Truckloads Of Goods Reach Heise Property; Work To Start

Materials for the construction of a CCC camp on the Heise property, East Mound Street, were being moved into Circleville Thursday.

By Thursday noon two truckloads of equipment had been moved onto the grounds. The local CCC officials expressed belief that actual construction of five buildings, two dormitories and three smaller buildings would begin within a few days.

A. H. Medendorp, superintendent of the CCC Central Repair Shop, said Thursday that he had been informed by the War Department that the camp would be given mechanical training at the Repair Shop, but he said the government had given him no indication of when the boys would be moved to Circleville.

Construction of the camp is expected to take at least two months. The two dormitories will be 120 feet by 40 feet and the three other buildings for materials and supplies are expected to be smaller.

The buildings will be erected in sections. Several sections already have arrived at the grounds.

The War Department has a five-year lease on the Heise property and establishment of the camp here is expected to be permanent. Boys at the camp will be under strict army supervision. Many of the supplies for the camp will be purchased locally.

FUGITIVE FROM MANSFIELD HELD FOR BURGLARY

A fugitive from Ohio State Reformatory, captured in an alley between Washington and Pickaway Streets early Thursday by Patrolman Alva Shasteen, confessed at noon Thursday to the theft of four quarts of whiskey and three pounds of ham from John D. Moore's establishment on East Ohio Street.

The youth, 19 years old, is Fred Marshall, of Youngstown, who escaped from Mansfield reformatory ten days ago. Marshall, who first told police and sheriff's officers his name was Robert Jones and he was from Canton, said he had been wandering over central Ohio since his escape from Mansfield July 1. He broke into the Moore establishment early Sunday in search of money.

Since his arrival in Circleville last Saturday night Marshall has been hiding in alleys in the east end, where a resident noticed him. (Continued on Page Four)

Vichy Trying To Negotiate Agreement With British To End Fight

Ultimatum Sent To General Dentz To Declare Vital Beirut Open City

BERLIN, July 10—France has rejected Britain's terms for an armistice in Syria, according to information in German official quarters today.

The Vichy government called Britain's conditions "incompatible with the situation."

Vichy government officials waited anxiously for further information regarding an ultimatum dispatched to Gen. Henri Dentz, French high commissioner for Syria, by the British commander, Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, demanding that Beirut be declared an open town and that French troops be evacuated from it by 5:30 a. m. today.

No information reached Vichy immediately regarding Dentz's reply to Wilson. (Editor's Note: Jerusalem reported no reply had been received from Dentz up to noon today—six and a half hours after the ultimatum expired—and that hostilities in Syria accordingly were continuing.)

Meanwhile, a new communique issued by the government stated that the British so far have made no reply to the true proposal originally advanced by Dentz on Tuesday.

Instead of replying to this proposal, the French announcement charged, the British intensified their attacks on all fronts in Syria.

Furthermore, it was claimed, British agents at Beirut distributed papers impugning on the military honor and dignity of Gen. Dentz. The communique stated (Continued on Page Four)

STUBBORN SOVIET ARMY TO RECEIVE MORE SUPPLIES

WASHINGTON, July 10—American defense officials conceded today that Russia's stubborn resistance to German invaders is expected to accelerate the flow of strategic materials from the United States to the Soviet.

Conferences between Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles and Soviet Ambassador Constantin Oumanski during the last few days are paving the way for substantial Russian orders of American machinery, equipment and petroleum products.

While Welles and Oumanski were discussing the broad, diplomatic aspects of American aid to Russia, representatives of the Soviet's Amtorg Trading Corp. were working out detailed purchasing proposals with State Department experts. At the conclusion of these meetings, Welles reported that the program of supplying certain materials to Russia was proceeding rapidly and effectively.

The American government's disposition to speed shipment of important materials to Russia stems from the fact that the Soviet war machine may prove tougher to the Nazis than had been anticipated.

WASHINGTON, July 10—Soviet Ambassador Constantin Oumanski paid his first visit to the White House today since the outbreak of the Russo-German war.

Punishment For Hiking Men Defended By Lear

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 10—Lieut.-Gen. Ben Lear, commander of the Second Army, today vigorously defended his action in punishing 350 men of the 35th Division for "yoo-hooing" and whistling at shorts-clad girls on a Memphis golf course.

Declaring that the punishment of compelling the men to retrace their route a second time, marching part of it afoot, was "neither severe nor unjust," Gen. Lear asserted that as long as he remained in command "soldierly standards of conduct will be demanded of all individuals in uniform."

Gen. Lear's defense was made in a telegram he sent Representative Paul Kilday (D) of Texas, who severely criticized the officer and called on him for an explanation. Representative Kilday is a member of the House Military Affairs Committee.

Gen. Lear said the soldiers' action "called for immediate and prompt action and under the circumstances I saw fit to take such action."

Gen. Lear previously denied that his order for disciplinary action was influenced by any remarks or taunts directed at him personally, as was suggested by Rep. Kilday.

"The remarks of the soldiers were not directed at me," Gen. Lear said. "They were directed at a group of girls and some men playing golf. Of course, none of the soldiers knew who I was."

One report of the incident said the soldiers, in addition to hailing the golf-playing girls from their truck convoy, shouted "get a caddy" and similar bits of advice in the direction of the general.

The "yoo-hoo" soldiers were forced to march 15 miles last Tuesday, besides making an extra trip in the trucks to Camp Robinson, Ark., 150 miles away.

GERMAN YOUTH WILLING TO FIGHT AGAINST KIN

DETROIT, July 10—William E. Bader, 22, whose father is a colonel in the German army, was enroute to Camp Grant, Ill., today following his induction into the United States army.

Bader, who has a half-brother in the Nazi air force, commented: "I'd hate to have to fight against my father and brother, but if I have to my adopted country comes first and I'll do it."

A chauffeur-butler for a Grosse Pointe family, Bader came to this country in 1927 with his mother who separated from her husband.

He has since become an American citizen.

NEW YORK, July 10—Revealing for the first time the number of American troops that will be sent to Iceland, the United Service Organizations today announced that they are making plans to provide recreational facilities for 80,000 soldiers. Richard W. Lawrence, city chairman of the USO, said the Canadian war services had agreed to cooperate in the move.

U. S. TO REQUIRE 1,418,000 MEN BY NEXT APRIL

WASHINGTON, July 10—The OPM today moved to supply 1,418,000 additional workers that will be needed by National Defense industries by next April to meet requirements of the existing defense program.

Sidney Hillman, associate director-general of the OPM, who announced the need for the huge labor supply, said that 12 governmental agencies, concerned with the training and recruiting of defense labor have been coordinated into one group with the OPM labor division to see that the labor demands are met.

The OPM labor chief said that the task of supplying the defense labor will be headed by Arthur S. Flemming, a member of the Civil Service Commission.

The 1,418,000 workmen needed include 323,900 for shipbuilding and 408,441 for aircraft factories, Hillman said. The defense effort, directly and indirectly, will require between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000 additional employees by next fall, he stated.

'EMPTY' PISTOL KILLS STEUBENVILLE BOY, 15

STEUBENVILLE, July 10—Steubenville's second "empty gun death" within six weeks was recorded today with the accidental shooting of 15-year-old George Andrews. The youth was shot through the chest when a revolver in the hands of Pee Cizes, 17, accidentally discharged. The latter youth told officers he thought the gun was empty.

Red Says Strife Just Beginning

LONDON, July 10—Soviet parachute troops have been dropped on the outskirts of Helsinki in Finland, a broadcast picked up by Reuters agency said today.

MOSCOW, July 10—Destruction of an entire German motorized division on the Lepel sector of the front—the greatest victory yet claimed by the Red army in the Russo-German war—was announced by the Soviet high command today.

In the words of the Russian war communique describing last night's activities:

"On the Lepel sector a German motorized division was wiped out."

According to the war bulletin the German motorized division that suffered annihilation included 40 guns, a large quantity of transport equipment and other "specialized machines."

Other successes were claimed for the Red armies up and down the huge battle line where violent fighting raged over many hundreds of miles.

On the Borisov sector, the communique said, enemy forces also suffered another "serious defeat."

Division Routed

An entire Nazi division was said to have been routed in the direction of Borisov, which lies roughly 60 miles south of Lepel where the motorized division met its doom.

Further north, on the Ostrov sector of the Estonian front, the communique said, all German attacks were repulsed with heavy losses.

Around Polodsk, north of Lepel, Soviet forces were declared to be making "resolute counterattacks."

On the Novograd Volinsk battle front, where the German drive has been aimed at the Ukraine, all Nazi attacks were said to have been checked and still further south the enemy offensive on the Bessarabian front was described (Continued on Page Four)

FOUR BOYS HELD FOR EASTERN STATE POLICE

Four boys from York, Pennsylvania, were being held by police and sheriff's officers Thursday, pending their release to Pennsylvania officers.

The boys are Joe Strine, 16; Kenneth Rentzel, 16; Donald Stambaugh, 15 and Ronald Stambaugh, 14. Members of the Pennsylvania Motor Patrol informed local officers Thursday that all four of the boys were wanted in Pennsylvania for burglary.

Rentzel has been charged previously with writing a ransom note, Strine with auto larceny and Ronald Stambaugh with petit larceny.

The youths were captured by local officers after they had aroused suspicion at the George Justus store on Route 22 east of Circleville. Justus phoned local officers who caught the youths as they drove into Circleville.

WAR DEPARTMENT PLANS DISPLAY OF EQUIPMENT

WASHINGTON, July 10—The War Department today promised to stage for members of congress a display of the nation's arms and man-power to demonstrate where at least part of the billions appropriated for defense during the last year have been spent. That was disclosed in a letter sent from Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, to Rep. Thom (D) Ohio, in which the army officer said the demonstration would be held near Washington.

REICH REPORTS NEW BATTLES

Nazis Doubling Efforts To Break Resistance On Stalin Line

BERLIN, July 10—"Vast new battles" have developed in several regions along the Stalin line in Russia, a German military spokesman announced today as the Nazis redoubled their drive to smash Red resistance.

"German strategy is developing irresistibly," the spokesman said. Reports from Vichy and other quarters that Germany has suffered heavy set-backs and sustained immense losses were flatly denied with the comment: "That's the same song we heard in other campaigns."

One of the largest of the fights raged on the Stalin line directly west of Moscow, where Russian military leaders have massed crack Soviet troops in a desperate gamble to retain a foothold in western Russia.

ALL NIGHT RAID CARRIED ON BY RAF AIRPLANES

LONDON, July 10—Terrific explosions shook the English coast from midnight to dawn today as swarms of British bombers roared across the English Channel and gave the German-occupied French coast one of the heaviest pastings of the war.

The zone of operations apparently extended all the way from Boulogne to Dunkirk.

Residents of southcoast English towns and even persons some distance inland were unable to sleep because of the inferno of crashing bombs across the water. They rose from bed and congregated on the cliff tops to watch the show.

While this shattering attack was in progress, other RAF planes attacked objectives at Aachen and Osmbruck in the Reich itself.

Since dawn this morning, with weather conditions ideal for flying, RAF fighters maintained a continuous patrol over the Straits of Dover.

MATURE DENIES HE AND BRIDE HAVING TROUBLE

HOLLYWOOD, July 10—Victor Mature, the 1941 version of a Broadway matinee idol, today denied reports that he and his bride of a few weeks, the former Martha Kemp, were on the verge of a separation.

Close friends of the actor's, in Hollywood to make a picture, said that both Mature and his pretty wife, who is the widow of Hal Kemp, popular orchestra leader, appeared to be in disagreement, but Mature laughed at the stories.

He said his wife, to whom he was married in New York several weeks ago, was due in Hollywood shortly.

NEW TRACKLESS TANK URGED BY WAR SECRETARY

Stimson Wants To Start Purchases Despite High Cost

ORDNANCE UNIT OPPOSED

Cabinet Member Believes Vehicle Answer To Hitler's Speed

By Drew Pearson and Robert Allen

WASHINGTON, July 10—With Germany making its inroads on Russia largely through the use of tanks, Secretary of War Stimson has been giving a lot of thought to developing an American weapon which would stop what he calls the "German monster."

Also he has been having a hot row with some of his own ordnance people over the purchase of a new and trackless tank which Stimson thinks may be the answer. The chief of ordnance, General C. M. Weason, opposed purchase of the new tank as far too expensive.

However, General Benedict Crowell, assistant secretary of war during the World War I and now War Department adviser on material, went over Weason's head to Secretary Stimson himself.

"An eight-wheel tank has just been developed," General Crowell told Stimson, "that is a wonderful thing. It may be the answer to Germany. It has been turned down by Ordnance, but I think you ought to see it."

So Secretary Stimson went over to Ft. Meyer and saw it demonstrated, later sent it down to Ft. Knox to General A. R. Chaffee, Chief of the Armored Force. Then he went to Ft. Knox, personally, and conferred with General Chaffee, who was enthusiastic, wanted the Army to order seven tanks immediately. But Ordnance wanted to order two at the most, considered the price far too high.

Turned Down Lewis Gun
At this point Stimson harked back to the days when he was Secretary of War in the Taft Administration.

"There is always a balance to be attained between what the fighting forces want and what the War Department in Washington wants them to have," he explained to friends, "and the trouble with the Ordnance office is that it is so deluged with people who want to win the war with new inventions."

ventions, that it gets rather callous.

"However, the last time I yielded to the Ordnance office in a matter like this was when I was Secretary of War under President Taft—and regretted it. The Ordnance people had turned down the Lewis machine-gun. General Crozier a very dear friend of mine, was opposed to it. I went behind the barracks and shot the gun, but in the end I bowed to General Crozier and the Army passed it up.

"Well the world now knows what became of the Lewis machine-gun. The next time I saw it I was in a British airplane over the English Channel in the last war, and the pilot was using a Lewis machine-gun against the enemy. The British had bought the patent and perfected it."

Aim More Deadly

So last week Stimson decided not to make the same mistake with the trackless tank. At Ft. Knox pictures were taken from inside the tank, looking out through a gun-hole, and it was proved that the eight wheels made the tank far smoother and thus more deadly in its aim. Also Stimson figured that it would take four to five months anyway to build two tanks, and seventeen could be built in the same period. So in the end he said: "To hell with Ordnance," and overruled General Weason.

Note—The original $58,000 price of the trackless tank, considered exorbitant, finally was reduced to about $35,000. Assistant Secretary of War McCloy, who handled the negotiations with Ordnance, got into a veritable hair-pulling contest with them, but he was only reflecting Secretary Stimson's views.

An American observer says "Hitler is spreading his armies out too much for his own good." We hope so.

"The Gentleman from Indiana"

"THE WILD MOB'S MILLION FEET"

A famous—or infamous—case is about to be settled. Because members of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers unlawfully seized the plant of the Apex Hosiery Company in Philadelphia and destroyed thousands of dollars worth of machinery the Union has now agreed to pay, in settlement of damages, the tidy sum of $110,000.

And because the public authorities of Philadelphia failed to protect the property from mob rule and civil war, the City will now pay the additional sum of $15,000. Every taxpayer in Philadelphia must now pay a higher tax because its mayor or police chief did not have nerve enough to enforce law and order.

Perhaps this is too harsh. It may be no political alliance existed whereby labor racketeers bought immunity from the law, either with money or votes. Perhaps the reason city, county and state authorities did nothing was because Washington, D. C., had taken over labor relations and therefore Philadelphia piously washed her hands and delivered Apex to the mob. Nevertheless the fact remains that for failure to enforce the law it is Philadelphia and not Washington, D. C., that is now paying $15,000 in settlement of damages. This ought to be a warning to the citizens of all cities. Apathy toward mob violence pays few dividends.

There are important angles to this case. According to the United States Supreme Court the Apex Manufacturing Company in April 1937 was employing 2500 persons making hosiery in a non-union shop. The American Federation of Hosiery Workers demanded a closed shop.

I here underline a remarkable fact. When this demand was made only 8 Apex employees out of 2500 belonged to the union; 2492 did not belong to the union! Nevertheless a strike was called by this tiny minority. Members of the union from other factories forcibly took possession. The locks on all gates were changed. Only strikers were given keys. No one was permitted to enter unless he had a pass from strike leaders. Possession was held against the owners and managers from May 6 to June 23, a period of seven weeks. On account of vandalism to machinery the plant could not resume operations until August 19th.

So for three and a half months 2492 workers were denied the right to work by 8 union members together with their hoodlum allies from the outside. Whether the 2492, or some of them approved the strike I do not know. My guess is that many "went along" simply to avoid the terrorism to which they saw the factory subjected. If so, they ought now to join in a lawsuit against the union and the city of Philadelphia, for their lost wages. As the Supreme Court said, this was "a lawless invasion of property's plant and destruction of its property by force and violence of the most brutal and wanton character, under leadership and direction of the union, and without interference from local authorities."

The judge might have added "without interference from federal authorities." Madame Perkins and Assistant Attorney General Robert Jackson, soon now to be a Supreme Court Justice, did not interfere. No one interfered. No one but the mob.

In the plant at the time of the sit-down were 134,000 dozens of finished hosiery, worth $800,000 ready to be shipped to customers in interstate commerce. The company asked of the strikers the privilege of entering their own plant to ship these goods. The poor privilege of entering their own plant to ship their own goods was denied.

Believing this constituted interference with interstate commerce the company brought suit against the striking union for damages under the Sherman anti-trust law. Our reorganized United States Supreme Court held that despite the admitted lawlessness the union was not liable. The only law, it said, that had been violated was local law against trespass to property. So the Apex Company filed a second suit in the state courts and it is this suit which is now being settled by the union and the city of Philadelphia by paying a total of $125,000.

However, three members of the Supreme Court—Chief Justice Hughes, McReynolds, and Roberts, were unable to agree with their New Deal brethren that "a direct and intentional obstruction of the shipment of goods in interstate commerce is not a violation of the Sherman Act."

But Hughes and McReynolds have now left our highest Court and presumably it now contains but one judge, Roberts, who believes the owners of property in a

HISSES GREET DEPARTURE OF GERMAN CONSUL

NEW YORK, July 10—Scattered hisses and boos from spectators at LaGuardia Airport today marked the departure of Dr. Hans Borchers, ousted German consul in New York, as he boarded a plane for San Francisco.

The Nazi diplomat, whose office suspended operations as a result of the federal order closing all axis consulates in the U. S., was accompanied by his wife, Adelaide, and their personal maid, Ellen Verhoff.

Dr. Borchers is reliably reported bound for a new diplomatic post in Shanghai. It is believed that in San Francisco he plans to join a Nazi group headed by Capt. Fritz Weidemann which is sailing Sunday for Japan.

SEARCH GOES ON FOR ARMED MEN ON WEST COAST

Authorities at Stockton, Cal., are continuing their search for two bandits who abducted and terrorized Paul Ashbrook, 21, and his fiancée Miss Katherine Dietz, 21, during an 80 mile ride early this week.

The Ashbrook youth's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Ashbrook of San Francisco, were visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. May, Circleville, when the crime was committed.

The only clue found so far has been the story of a Lodi, Cal., farmer, who said he had seen two men speeding through Lodi Monday night in a green car the description of which matched the one stolen from Ashbrook. The youth and Miss Dietz were left bound in a Stockton cemetery.

One of the bandits has been identified as Carl Westover, 23-year-old desperado.

ELDERLY SOLON BETTER HITTER THAN COLLEAGUE

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., July 10—In the matter of fisticuffs at least, elderly Rep. J. A. Gray (R) today appeared to have gotten the better of youthful Minority Leader Howard Elliott (R) in a battle which enlivened Missouri's legislative halls last night.

Fists flew when Rep. Gray claimed that his testimony was refused by a committee investigating charges of bribery and collusion in the legislature. Rep. Elliott, chairman of the committee, overheard Rep. Gray's claim.

"That's a lie," snapped Elliott. Gray removed his glasses and landed a body blow on the young committee chairman, meanwhile shouting:

"It's just a whitewash committee and everybody knows it."

"That," retorted Elliott, "is a contemptible lie."

Gray then went into action again, smashing Elliott's cigar with a neat left hook to the face. Before any more blows could be struck, other legislators separated the two.

The committee is scheduled to report late today on charges brought by Charles Hay, St. Louis attorney, that bribery and collusion contributed to the defeat of the St. Louis teacher's pension bill.

Elliott, who is from St. Louis, said that Gray refused to state the nature of the testimony he offered the committee, and that the committee understood it was "something not related to our immediate investigation."

AMERICAN TROOPS BEING TAKEN TO NEW DISTRICTS

NEW YORK, July 10—Carrying an undisclosed number of American troops, the U. S. Army transport Oriente was on the high seas today bound for Puerto Rico and Trinidad. The vessel sailed from the Brooklyn army base yesterday.

Two farewell notes were found in the room and police said indications were that the attractive singer shot the youngster with a .25 caliber pistol and then turned the gun on herself.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by dried kidney tubes, and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

SOMETIMES in your automobile you want zip and ginger, sometimes thrift.

Just name your choice. In this high-stepping Buick straight-eight with Compound Carburetion† you can have either, each in its proper place.

You can go about your business in easy, ordinary, everyday travel—and this frugal, two-carburetor system will keep you rolling smoothly with only the forward, thrift-size mixer on the job.

Yet, any time you want life, lift, super-power it's there with an extra wallop in reserve—just step down on the treadle and you've got it.

That simple move sends the second carburetor into action; steps up not only fuel supply but the air supply as well.

Thus you have your fun—and frugality too. Owners report mileage figures as much as 10% to 15% higher than on previous Buicks of the same size.

Which means, better go look at the engine that's both thrill-packed and thrifty too. You'll find it in a bigger, roomier, smarter-looking automobile that gives you more value per dollar than anything else you can buy.

CAMP MEETING AT STOUTSVILLE OPENS JULY 22

United Brethren Leaders
Plan Big Conference
Lasting To Aug. 3

REV. WHITWELL TO TALK

Persons In Charge Of Young
Peoples' Work, Music
Announced

United Brethren Church leaders have selected July 22 to August 3 as dates for their annual camp meeting at the Stoutsville Camp-ground.

The Rev. L. Spurgeon Metzler of the Pickaway U. B. Circuit, who is secretary of the Camp-ground Association, said Thursday that the Rev. Dewey Whitwell, D. D., of Nashville, Tenn., and the Rev. Porter E. Wright, D. D., of Lancaster, district superintendent, would serve as evangelists. The Rev. Mr. Wright is a former Circleville pastor. The Rev. Mr. Whitwell is widely known among United Brethren Church members in Ohio, having appeared in this district several times.

The camp will be opened Tuesday, July 22, with an address by the Rev. Mr. Whitwell.

Music this year will be provided by the Kutch Sisters of Lebanon, Pa.

The Rev. Mr. Metzler said that the Rev. Lena Houdeshell would be in charge of youth work during the camp meeting, and that Mrs. Marx and Mrs. Eskew of Lancaster would handle children's work.

NEW SING SING WARDEN NEVER SAW EXECUTION

OSSINING, N. Y., July 10.—Robert J. Kirby, 51-year-old successor to Lewis E. Lawes as warden of Sing Sing prison, today arrived to take over his new job—and to admit in his 27 years of penal work that he never witnessed an execution.

Kirby, who like Lawes is opposed to capital punishment, and regards executions as "gruesome," is required in his new post to supervise and watch Sing Sing's electrocutions. During his 21 years as warden, Lawes witnessed 303 executions.

ASHVILLE

By S. D. Fridley
Ashville, Phone 79

In our perambulations through the alleys of Ashville recently we passed the property of ex-Mayor Fraunfelter and wife who reside at 91 Powell Street and saw one of the most pleasing sights in our experience. They have about twenty White Rock pullets and cockerels largely of the female persuasion which they purchased from Jimmy Woodworth, who reared them from day-old-chicks in the parsonage basement. These chicks were hatched February 12, 1941. The present owners came into possession of this flock May 3, at which time they averaged two pounds each and at the present time they will tip the scales at 3½ to 6 pounds. And to make the record better one of the pullets laid her first egg Wednesday of this week.

While we are on this subject our memory reverts back to the period when Ashville had one of the best small poultry shows in central Ohio attracting some leading breeders from many miles around. This exhibition was in the heyday of its success around the year 1918, staging a show during the extremely freezing weather of the week following. Fraunfelter was secretary of the association for a number of years and C. C. Cloud was superintendent of shows. Mr. Fraunfelter has always raised White Rocks and at that time had a strain that always brought home the blue ribbon.

Prior to the organization of the local Poultry Association the poultry flocks around Ashville were mongrel in type—Duke's Mixture—but soon considerable attention was paid the humble hen until you found pure or standard bred fowls wherever poultry was raised. The worth to the community was immense. However since we have no poultry organization we likewise do not have the farmer interest.

For the best interest of farmers and raisers of small flocks we can imagine no one thing that will bring the poultry industry back where it belongs with large and small flocks uniform, pleasing to the eye and remuneration to the pocket book, than a reorganization of a poultry association within our midst. We did it twenty years ago—we can do it again. Who will start the ball rolling?

The pea pack at the Crites Milling Company factory closed Saturday, June 28, after having been in operation since May 30. At the peak of operations, 160 persons were on the payroll. The quality of the pack was exceptionally good while the yield was low, the late drought reducing the crop perceptibly. Especially was this noticeable in the late sweet variety which was estimated at one-third crop. The complete output 1941 pea pack was 41,000 cases or 984,000 cans and the company's reputation for dependable canned goods is proven as only about 17,000 or 18,000 cases remain in stock. The corn pack, of the yellow variety, is expected to open about the last week in July, depending largely on the weather.

The local business men are sponsoring a band concert by the V. F. W. 60-piece organization of Circleville, Ohio, made up of the best musicians in the surrounding community and directed by Fred J. Hines in down town Ashville, Saturday at 8:30 p. m. This will be a musical treat you can't afford to miss and the home town will leave no stone unturned to extend the visitors a most cordial welcome while our guests.

Washington Merry-Go- Round

In the campaign against France, U. S. military experts estimated that the Germans used about 700,000 horses to bring up infantry, field kitchens, hospitals, food, guns, ammunition and all the other vast paraphernalia of war.

NAZIS LEARNED FROM CIRCUS

Inability to organize transportation is one of the Russian army's greatest defects—especially so while transport trains, airports, railroad trains and switch yards are being bombed ceaselessly from the air. Also the Russians have no genius whatsoever for repair. Trucks and tanks will get out of kilter and the Russians simply abandon them on the roadside. The Nazis, in contrast, will be on hand with traveling garages and repair the stalled equipment immediately.

So this war, spread over very long distances, may be won by the army which has the best organized transportation.

Note—The Nazis learned the art of quick transportation by coming to the United States and studying the American circus—probably the greatest development of the technique of quick unloading, hauling and repairing.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

The White House is the oldest federal building in Washington. Designed by James Hoban, an Irishman living in Charleston, S. C., the mansion was completed in 1800 and the first President to occupy it was John Adams. It was originally called the "President's Palace" by L'Enfant, French engineer who laid out the Capital. President Theodore Roosevelt was the first to designate it officially as the White House, in an executive order issued October 21, 1901. Assistant Secretary of Commerce Robert Hinkley was responsible for the dispatch of the group of crack airplane mechanics to Britain to familiarize the RAF with the repair and maintenance of U. S. made planes. During his visit to Britain, Hinkley was struck by the need for such a crew and within a week after his return, arranged to send one. State Employment officials who balk at cooperating with federal authorities in procuring defense workers are headed for a surprise. With funds provided for this purpose by Congress, the U. S. Employment Service is preparing to disregard the obstructive state officials and set up separate employment offices.

U. S. FATIGUE PILLS

Those mysterious anti-fatigue pills fed German soldiers before going into battle are nothing new to the U. S. Army. In fact, U. S. nutrition experts have gone the Germans one better.

The Nazi pill is simply a tablet made of a mixture of corn sugar and citric acid. The acid causes a flow of saliva which in turn promotes quick digestion of the corn sugar, giving the soldier a "lift" within a few minutes after the pill is swallowed.

U. S. Army experts have developed a much improved version, known as Type D super-emergency ration. It consists of a concentrated chocolate bar fortified with vitamin B. The bar weighs one ounce, can be carried in the soldier's pocket and will withstand heat up to 120 degrees. It is enclosed in a special wrapper which will resist eight hours of mustard gas attack. One bar is the energy equivalent of a full meal.

The Army also has developed a special ration for pilots, consisting of a cracker containing whole wheat, soybean meal, ground beef muscle, whole milk, hydrogenated fat, vitamins and minerals. This cracker will withstand tropical heat without spoiling.

PRISON REFORMER

THE resignation of Lewis E. Lawes as warden of Sing Sing is of interest to many persons beyond the confines of the country's most famous prison. Lawes has been warden there for a little over 21 years. He wants to retire from that "seven-day week, 24-hour job" while he is still young enough to enjoy some other opportunities, such as writing, lecturing and doing radio work.

Opposed to capital punishment, he has nevertheless supervised more executions than any other man in the United States. He is known to most Americans because of his writings and radio work and particularly because of his efforts to make prison a place of rehabilitation and reform rather than punishment alone.

Persons engaged in such a constructive fight seem sometimes to be losing it. The total number of prisons and the prison population in the United States continue to increase from year to year. One type of crime may decline, but others gain.

There is much confusion in the public mind about parole for prisoners and "coddling" and prison reform. Sometimes these services are hampered by politics and graft and then there is an outcry against them. Yet even persons who think they do not believe in prison reform would hardly want to return to the extreme penal practices of an earlier time. Also, if given half a chance to make good, a great many prisoners do so. Society, it should not be forgotten, is benefited when this happens quite so much as the convicts themselves.

EDUCATION

AN educator says that in spite of the changes in school programs nowadays, and the larger and more varied subjects taught, the three R's are still being stressed as much as ever.

This may be true enough as far as writing and arithmetic are concerned. In the latter field, especially, an old-timer is often astonished at the grasp of mathematics shown by modern students. But as for reading, and the spelling that presumably goes with it, the proficiency of this generation is open to question.

It's appalling, how much misspelling and mispronunciation a person can run across nowadays if he looks and listens around. And then in the matter of grammar, which is more or less related to the three R's, a lot of young high school graduates certainly give an impression that the old rules have gone. Sentence construction often seems as free as the air. Boys and girls are inclined to "speak right on", letting the words fall where they may.

People who always insist on "doing what they think is right" can make an awful lot of trouble.

With all this arming, it's just as well for private citizens not to catch the fever and start totting guns.

That Syrian business begins to look serious.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

—By—
Charles F. Stewart

The war of the isolationists against the ex-Republican, ex-Army colonel, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox probably won't reach the shooting stage, even if the Navy itself has accidentally on purpose already taken a shot or two at the Nazis.

When the congressmen, however, get Colonel Knox on the spot for a little questioning by the Senate Naval Affairs Committee on just what has been going on in the Atlantic, they may do a little shouting about the amazing log which the general secretary with the Sunny Jim grin has written on his shakedown cruises into the uncharted seas of oratory and his test flights in trial balloons.

His record of war-like utterances, climaxed by his most recent and most amazing statement that the U. S. Navy should "clear the Atlantic of the German menace," has left Washington gasping. There is a little talk of impeachment, but that's wild, too. The

net score to date is that not once has Secretary Knox had to use parachute or life preserver to get back to the safe harbor of his desk, from which base he just grins broadly, saying nothing, or at the most, "No comment."

HE WON'T TALK

What about those men up on the hill who want his scalp?

"No comment!"

Did the President okay his speeches?

"No comment."

"Is he going to resign?"

"I'll let you write your own answer to that."

The answer is that he is not going to resign at all. They'll have to torpedo him out of the job. He loves it. And he has been shipwrecked out on a limb, and had his bow tie fired across before.

Though he is still running an unscheduled race with cotton-mouthed Senator Claude E. Pepper of Tallahassee, Fla., as to who

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN

PARTIES EYE WILLKIE

WASHINGTON — The 1942 political rumba is still a long way off, but the politicians already have begun to cast their eyes over possible candidates. One of their chief topics of discussion is the governorship of New York.

Herbert Lehman, thrice Governor of the Empire State, is certain not to run again. This creates a wide open situation for a prize considered a stepping stone to the 1944 presidential contest. Remember that Franklin Roosevelt went from the Executive Mansion in Albany to the White House in 1932.

A number of hopefuls are known to be ready to try their luck, chief among them Republican Tom Dewey and Democratic Lieutenant Governor Charles Poletti. Dewey came near beating Lehman in 1938 and his yen for the presidency is undiminished. As Governor of New York, he would have the inside track for another shot at this ambition. Poletti is a political protegee of Lehman and was selected as runningmate on his insistence.

But the most interesting possibility being mentioned in inner political circles is Wendell Willkie.

Particularly significant is that this talk is coming from Democrats as well as Republicans. These Democrats are not the party bolters who supported Willkie against Roosevelt last year. They are men who fought Willkie bitterly then, but now feel differently because of his outspoken stand against isolationism and appeasement.

Convinced that this issue will dominate the 1942 elections, these Democrats already are discussing the possibility of starting a boom for Willkie as a fusion candidate for Governor.

NOTE—Willkie has not been approached on the idea, has given no intimation even to close friends that he is interested. But the idea is in the air, and, as proved in 1940, anything can happen in politics.

GERMANY vs. RUSSIA

One of the key factors in gauging the Russo-German war is that the Germans are marveled at transportation; the Russians are not.

As long as the Red Army can force the Nazis to fight a diggin-in, slow type of warfare, Hitler's forces are up against it. But when ever Nazi mechanized columns are out ahead, dodging through Russian wheat fields, then even if they sometimes get cut off from their own forces, the advantage is very much with Germany.

So far, the Nazis have employed exactly the same tactics they used so successfully in France, cutting through enemy lines with one mechanized spearhead, then widening that spearhead with infantry.

This use of infantry is one tactic of the German army which most people have not realized. For although the shock attacks have been accomplished by tanks and heavily armored troops, Germany's great military genius has been the ability to bring up horse-drawn infantry immediately and widen the gap made by the panzers.

Young mothers are confronted with no more worrisome problem than having the baby lose its meals regularly by vomiting. An occasional vomiting spell is to be expected.

Dr. Clending will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

pected and does no harm, but when it gets to be a regular habit, it is a real cause for concern.

Looking over the histories of a series of such cases, one is struck by the frequent changes of food and formulae. This is perfectly natural, since the anxious mother is at her wit's end to find something that will agree with the baby.

It is probable that the changes are sometimes the cause of the condition, and upset the baby more than if a single routine formula were followed. The type of food given is not so often the cause of habitual vomiting in babies as some other factors, however.

Air Swallowing

One common cause that is not considered often enough by the mother is air swallowing. This is due to improper technique of feeding—improperly shaped nipples on the feeding bottles or nipples with the holes too large or too small, or failure to remove the nipple from the baby's mouth often enough, or feeding with the baby lying on its back, or the use of pacifiers, or finger sucking.

Too frequent feeding may also be a cause. Babies should not be fed oftener than every three hours.

Still another mistake is too much food. The baby may regurgitate or actually vomit simply because it is overloaded with food. The food of the vomiting baby, however, should not be diluted. It requires a more concentrated formula with less water.

Food Formulas

The faults that are found in the food formulas themselves are usually that they are too rich in cream. This invariably causes vomiting in some children. Spoilage of food due to improper refrigeration may have to be considered. Both of these problems may be met by changing to a dried milk preparation and preparation of individual feedings.

Tough curds may be noticed in the vomitus and might be a cause. They can generally be overcome by boiling the cow's milk formula or adding lactic acid to the formula or using evaporated milk.

The possibility of an obstruction to the outlet of the stomach which occurs in young children and causes persistent vomiting from birth is known to every physician. But this is a rare condition and, besides, the vomiting is continuous, which is not exactly the problem we are considering here. Severe constipation may be a cause. It can be relieved by correcting the formula or by the use of mineral oil.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

D. H. D.:—"Is there anything serious in having little white spots on the lips?"

Answer: No. The condition is known as Stelwagon's disease and is simply a thickening of the openings of the little ducts of the glands that lubricate the mucous membrane.

CHAPTER FORTY-TWO

STANLEY KING nervously wiped his brow with a silk handkerchief. "There were deputy sheriffs on the old tunnel road near my place, apparently hunting for the murderer," he explained. "I sent my gardener to them to report the shot."

"Nobody reported to me," the sheriff declared. "Could you tell, from the sound, where the gunman stood?"

"Close by the window," King paled at the memory. "The explosion almost deafened me!" The sheriff frowned. "And he missed you? We'll take a look at the place. Maybe in daylight we'll find footprints or an empty cartridge."

"Why do you have to go to my house to hunt the killer?" King demanded, breathing heavily. "You know that the only men who could have killed John Ives must be in this room!" He looked at Henry. The little clerk felt a chill crawl along his back.

From the rear of the room John Jones approached the three men and Marcia in time to hear the last remark. "That's right," Jones agreed. "The man who killed John Ives must be in this room. I have a test I wish to propose, if Henry Potter's test has failed."

Marcia drew in her breath sharply. "Why—has Henry been testing us?"

King scoffed, almost sneering. "Any test Henry would propose would be bound to fail—unless Henry took the test himself!"

"What I propose to do," said Jones, "is to run this one locomotive around the track directly behind one of those that was in the crash the night Ives was found dead. I know this one hasn't been touched since it came from the factory. I'm curious to see if there is any difference in operation."

The sheriff grunted. "What will that prove?" I'm already about convinced that Potter is guilty."

"If there is a difference in operation it will prove that someone tampered with the locomotives that were used that night."

The sheriff shrugged. "Go ahead. Play with your trains if you want to. I'm going to King's house." As he walked to the door he added significantly, "My men are still around the building—within earshot—if you need help. Coming, Mr. King? And you—Potter—don't try to get away."

The banker nodded. "If you're leaving, so am I. I'll feel safer out of Henry Potter's company. I still think you ought to lock him up."

"I'm going with you, too! Marcia announced.

As soon as they were alone the insurance man turned to Henry. "I wouldn't worry about him too much. Seems to be an excitable type. I'll blow over."

"He—he's liable to talk the sheriff into hanging me!"

"Forget it! It's obvious you're not the type to be a murderer. Let's try out this locomotive. By the way, where's Susan Baker?"

"I don't know. I'll ask Laurence." Henry went to the young farmer where he stood in a corner of the room by himself. He was startled to see that Laurence's eyes, supposedly helping him in adjusting scenery, were in reality fixed on Spinnell with a burning glare of hatred.

"Laurence!"

The young man started. "Oh, hello, Henry!"

"What's wrong?"

"Nothing's wrong."

"Why didn't Susan come to the meeting today?"

Laurence flushed. His eyes snapped to Spinnell again, then dropped to his work. "She said she didn't—want to."

"You—you think quite a lot of her, don't you?"

Laurence looked up and regarded Henry steadily. His face was white. When he spoke his voice was low and strained. "You've guessed it, Henry. I might as well tell you everything. I've got to tell someone! I think—too much—of her. That's all I can do! I can't get her out of my mind!"

"But you . . ."

"Yes, I know. I'm married. Perhaps if my wife had come to these club meetings . . ." He turned to the scenery and adjusted a tree so savagely he broke it.

"Women are peculiar," Henry observed. "How do you know your wife doesn't love you just as much as though she did come with you? Mine bosses me around. She does everything but swear at me. And last night she darn near fainted when she thought I was hurt! She fell down and cried. I—I never thought she really cared so much."

"But you don't understand," said Laurence. "It's not my wife. It's Susan! I just can't stay away from her. I tried to stay away from meetings. I couldn't. I had to come. And every time I saw her it was worse. She seemed to encourage me. His voice dropped to a whisper. "Now—now she tells me she's in love with Spinnell!"

John Jones called to them from the other side of the room. "Come over here, you two. We're ready to start the trains."

Pete Simmons, the only first timer, was gazing in awe at the lineup of locomotives in the miniature railroad terminal. Henry had to admit that the streamliner set on the tracks by Jones added a dash of attractive color, but he was thinking more of what Laurence had said. Henry looked at Susan and couldn't imagine him and Susan as a match. The girl, he guessed, had used that method of discouraging the young farmer's unwanted attentions.

"All set!" announced Jones, with the proud air of a small boy showing off his newest toy. "Hans, you operate the control board. Take one locomotive after another out on the track and put them through every maneuver possible. We'll compare their performance."

Hans ducked under the table and through the hidden door into the control room. The lights dimmed, although the night effect was dispelled by the faint glow from one cellar window that had not been covered by the canvas scenery.

One of the locomotives that had been in the wreck the night Ives was killed moved out on the main line. Except for a broken cowcatcher it seemed as good as ever. The tiny wheels, which because everything else was in scale gave the effect of mighty drivers, gathered speed as sparks snapped under them. Signal lights turned red behind it as it clicked over the rail joints toward the model mountains to the west. Around the curve it took a turnout onto another line. Behind it the streamliner came to life as signals turned to green. A moment later the third locomotive, a freight hog, rolled across the yard switches and picked up momentum down the main.

"Gosh!" stuttered the taxi driver, "I'll have to tell Joe about this!"

Jones was frowning. He watched each locomotive as it went around the loop, crossing from track to track so that eventually they all went through the same performance.

"How about it?" asked Spinnell. "I don't see anything unusual."

Jones shook his head. "Neither do I. That destroys the alibi they might have built up for Henry."

Henry started. "You—you don't mean you're going to take sides with Mr. King against me?"

"I'm sorry," said the insurance man. "If these locomotives weren't tampered with it wasn't necessary for the murderer to have attended any of the previous meetings of the railroad club. He might not have been a member of the club—as you are not, Henry."

Today's Garden-Graph

Disbudding to Obtain Display Dahlias

If you are planning to exhibit your dahlias this fall in a dahlia show, they should be disbudded this month.

As shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph, when growing the large flowered varieties, each stem should be allowed to develop but one flower. The buds grow in a cluster of three, and this means that the two poorest ones should be pinched out. Go down the stalk and take off the two sets of leaves just below the bud. By thus disbudding you will have a strong, long stem with one extra large flower, because it has gotten the nourishment which otherwise would have gone to the two other buds. Only five stems should be left on each plant.

During the hot days of late summer keep the leaf hopper away from dahlias by spraying them with pyrethrum or tobacco dust.

The Rev. and Mrs. Joseph Freese and daughters, Joanne and Margaret of Columbus were Tuesday supper guests of Mrs. Anna Freese and Mr. and Mrs. Glen Christy.

Margaret remained for the week while her parents and sister are attending the National Luther League convention of the United Lutheran Church in Kitchener, Ontario.

However, Uncle Mike said tentatively, if assured of a $700,000 gate he would stage the match in Detroit—otherwise it will probably be in New York.

"Of course, I'll bring it here if it will draw as much as in New York. There are about 12 different taxes they have on you there," he said.

"I figure it's about my last bout. There aren't any others around that I haven't fought."

Joe did not clarify his statement.

DIMAGGIO TAKES RECORD INTO PARK OF BROWNIES

ST. LOUIS, July 10 — Joe DiMaggio, whose record consecutive hitting streak has now extended through 45 games, will try to lengthen his record tonight at the expense of Johnny Niggeling and the St. Louis Browns.

Neither left handers nor right handers, speed ball pitchers or fellows with slow stuff, have been able to stop the Yankee clipper but it may be that Niggeling and his "flutter" ball will turn the trick.

Bob Feller said recently that somebody without much reputation would stop DiMaggio and all would hit four line drives and all would be caught. Niggeling would seem to fit that description exactly.

Carl Fausnaugh of Columbus visited Mr. and Mrs. Jack Kelly and daughter, Betty, and other relatives here over the week end.

Mrs. C. A. Thomas spent Thursday with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kirkpatrick and family of Circleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Glen Conrad of Circleville visited O. W. Conrad and daughter, Sarah, Sunday.

Mrs. Ethel Valentine of Ashville called Monday on Mrs. Sarah Stein.

Miss Irene Gibson of Mansfield is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Jack Kelly and daughter, Betty.

Paul Wood of Chicago, Ill., arrived July 4 to join his wife and family who have been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Meyers, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Woods and son, Paul, visited to Cincinnati Saturday to visit his father. They will return to Chicago, Ill., after a visit in that city.

Mrs. William Westenberg of Oakland visited Thursday with Mrs. Clarence Conrad and family.

CLASSIFICATIONS OF 45 MARRIED MEN CHANGED

SERVICE BOARD OFFICIALS CITE NEW DECISIONS

Registrants Who Wed Before Date For Signing Up Cited As Having Dependents

LAW NOT GENERAL ONE

Serial Numbers Assigned To 21-Year-Old Who Signed Up For Service

Pursuant to recent rulings from National Headquarters on the status of married men, the local draft board Wednesday night reopened and reconsidered classifications of 50 men and transferred all but five of them from 1-A and 1-B classifications to 3-A.

The new rulings in effect make marriage prior to the registration date a presumption of dependency. However, if a registrant has been married since the date he registered, it is incumbent on him to prove that his marriage was not an attempt to evade induction under the Selective Service Act.

In such cases the local board may request written evidence to substantiate any claim of dependency by reason of marriage.

Of the fifty men reconsidered by the board, ten had been definitely placed in 1-A and 15 tentatively in 1-A pending physical examination. Fifteen were in class 1-B as qualified for limited military service.

Notices of changes in their classification will be mailed to the registrants immediately, local draft officials said.

Instructions from National Headquarters have informed local board members that the "newly-married registrant has the same general right to deferment as any other married registrant," providing he can prove he is not married to evade induction. The local board also has been informed that "any reasonable doubt in connection with dependency should be resolved in favor of deferment."

Not Automatic

The new ruling on married men does not mean, however, local draft officials pointed out, that every married registrant is entitled to a 3-A classification or to deferment from the class in which he has been placed. It merely means that his case may be reopened by the board.

During Wednesday night's session the local board serial numbered the county's 142 new registrants. Names of the 21-year-olds were shuffled and drawn at random, serial numbers being given in the sequence in which they were drawn.

The new list of 21-year-olds will be held by the local board until the national lottery on July 17. Following the national lottery, the registrants will be ordered numbered according to the sequence in which their serial numbers were drawn in Washington.

The 21-year-old men who registered for Selective Service on July 1 will be integrated for induction among previous registrants with order numbers larger than the last inductee of their local board.

Rather than to place these youthful new registrants ahead of the older registrants on their local board lists, it has been decided to integrate them proportionately, Brig. Gen. Lewis B.

Lawes Retires

LEWIS E. Lawes, 57, above, warden of Sing Sing prison, Ossining, N. Y., has submitted his resignation. In good health, Lawes said his desire was to retire from such a strenuous post while he still is "physically and mentally vigorous." He plans to write, lecture and may go into radio and movie work.

Hershey, Deputy Director of Selective Service, stated.

Example Listed

For an example, General Hershey said, if there should happen to be 10 new registrants in an area and 100 old registrants awaiting call, one new registrant would be placed after each group of 10 old registrants. The serial numbers in the order they are drawn in the lottery will constitute a master list to be used by local boards in assigning "Sequence Numbers" to their July 1st registrants, in this manner:

The registrant in each local board area whose serial number appears at the top or nearest the top of this second master list will be given "Sequence Number 1" in his area; the registrant whose serial number is next closest to the top will receive "Sequence Number 2," and so on until each July 1st registrant has a sequence number.

As was the procedure in connection with the previous national lottery in October 1940, local boards will cross off on the second master list and ignore those serial numbers that are not held by any registrant in their areas.

When sequence numbers have been assigned to all new registrants, the local boards will assign each of these registrants an order number to be determined by integrating them among the old registrants. This means that the new registrant with Sequence No. 1 in his local board area will receive the lowest order number assigned to his group, and the registrant with the largest sequence number will receive the highest order number for the same group.

MORE POLICE ON DUTY AT STRUCK CINCINNATI FIRM

CINCINNATI, July 10—Additional police armed with tear gas guns, were on duty today at the strike-bound meat plant of E. Kahn & Sons company as the result of disorders and a shooting in which 10 persons were hurt, one seriously, and eight others arrested.

The disorders began Tuesday as pickets paraded in a circular course past the main entrance. Additional pickets slept in cars as the round-the-clock picketing went on, and lunches and coffee were served to the strikers.

HUSBAND JAILED IN SHOOTING OF ESTRANGED WIFE

DALLAS, Tex., July 10—The Dallas County grand jury was to hear testimony today about the bedroom slaying of Mrs. Laura Jackson, 35, wife of Robert A. Jackson, a chemical salesman.

Jackson is under a charge of murder. Mrs. Jackson was shot and killed, her companion, Victor Briggs, 26, was shot twice in the chest last night. His condition was said at a hospital to be serious.

The shooting occurred in a bedroom of Briggs' apartment. Briggs said he was awakened by a flash of light in his face, and was shot immediately. Officers believed Mrs. Jackson was shot as she slept. Jackson surrendered to officers, but declined to discuss the matter. It was learned that he and his wife were estranged and he had been in California. He returned to Dallas a few days ago.

Briggs and his wife had been separated for several weeks.

COUCH FIRE BREAKS OUT IN HARRINGTON HOME

Early discovery of a fire at the William Harrington residence on East Franklin Street Wednesday night at 8:15 prevented possible serious damage.

The blaze started on a couch in the living room. No one was at the residence at the time, but a passerby noticed the fire through the window and summoned the fire department. The couch was destroyed but nothing else was burned, firemen said.

Sure, everybody has a right to work. Also a duty.

SOVIET CLAIMS WAR'S BIGGEST VICTORY

New Barriers Against Reich Suggested; Wendell Willkie Hints Possible Steps

MAY 27 TALK RECALLED

Wheeler Says U. S. Rates With Hitler For Its Acts Of Piracy

WASHINGTON, July 10—President Roosevelt's intimate circle of "fight now" advisers today are urging him to use the United States Navy immediately to seize the strategic Portuguese islands of Cape Verde and the Azores in the eastern Atlantic in order to erect new barriers against a Hitler invasion of the Americas.

Advocated by Secretary of War Stimson, Secretary of the Navy Knox and Acting Secretary of State Welles, the move would carry the U. S. flag thousands of miles across the Atlantic to the very doors of southwestern Europe and Africa. The Azores lie 1,000 miles off Portugal while the Cape Verde Islands are 481 miles off the coast of Africa.

That some such move is under presidential consideration was revealed by Wendell Willkie, the GOP presidential nominee of last year, after a personal conference with Mr. Roosevelt. On leaving the White House, Willkie said:

"The protection of Iceland in my judgment is the first step in a series of similar steps that should shortly be taken. The matter of the particular places to be occupied is a technical question on which I do not pretend to be an expert."

Without mentioning the Azores or Cape Verde, Willkie added:

"If it is necessary to occupy bases in northern Ireland or even in northern Scotland, I would be in favor of that."

Plans Not Revealed
The United States Navy meanwhile cloaked its plans in complete secrecy. High officials, including Secretary Knox, said only that the Navy will carry out Mr. Roosevelt's orders—as incorporated in his message to congress on the occupation of Iceland—"that the approaches between the Americas and those strategic outposts, the safety of which this country regards as essential to its national security, and which it must therefore defend, shall remain open

27 FREIGHT CARS BLOCK BUCKEYE LAKE DISTRICT

BUCKEYE LAKE, July 10—Twenty-seven cars of a New York Central freight train jumped the track at nearby Lakeside today, blocking the Thurston-Bucyrus right-of-way and cutting off access to about 25 summer cottages. A split rail was believed responsible. The train crew escaped injury. Witnesses estimated that the coal and box cars jammed in a pile nearly 50 feet high.

MATERIALS FOR CCC CAMP BEGIN TO ARRIVE HERE

Two Truckloads Of Goods Reach Heise Property; Work To Start

Materials for the construction of a CCC camp on the Heise property, East Mound Street, were being moved into Circleville Thursday.

By Thursday noon two truck loads of equipment had been moved onto the grounds. The local CCC officials expressed belief that actual construction of five buildings, two dormitories and three smaller buildings would begin within a few days.

A. H. Medendorp, superintendent of the CCC Central Repair Shop, said Thursday that he had been informed by the War Department that the camp would house fifty boys who would be given mechanical training at the Repair Shop, but he said the government had given him no indication of when the boys would be moved to Circleville.

Construction of the camp is expected to take at least two months. The two dormitories will be 120 feet by 40 feet and the three other buildings for materials and supplies are expected to be smaller.

The buildings will be erected in sections. Several sections already have arrived at the grounds.

The War Department has a five-year lease on the Heise property and establishment of the camp here is expected to be permanent. Boys at the camp will be under strict army supervision. Many of the supplies for the camp will be purchased locally.

FUGITIVE FROM MANSFIELD HELD FOR BURGLARY

A fugitive from Ohio State Reformatory, captured in an alley between Washington and Pickaway Streets early Thursday by Patrolman Alva Shastene, confessed at noon Thursday to the theft of four quarts of whiskey and three pounds of ham from John D. Moore's establishment on East Ohio Street.

The youth, 19 years old, is Fred Marshall, of Youngstown, who escaped from Mansfield reformatory ten days ago. Marshall, who first told police and sheriff's officers his name was Robert Jones and he was from Canton, said he had been wandering over central Ohio since his escape from Mansfield July 1. He broke into the Moore establishment early Sunday in search of money.

Since his arrival in Circleville last Saturday night Marshall has been hiding in alleys in the east end, where a resident noticed him. (Continued on Page Four)

STRIFE GOES ON DESPITE SYRIAN PEACE EFFORTS

Vichy Trying To Negotiate Agreement With British To End Fight

AMERICAN TAKING PART

Ultimatum Sent To General Dentz To Declare Vital Beirut Open City

BERLIN, July 10—France has rejected Britain's terms for an armistice in Syria, according to information in German official quarters today.

The Vichy government called Britain's conditions "incompatible with the situation."

Vichy, July 10—Fighting raged in Syria today while the Vichy government prepared to negotiate a peace agreement with the British and Free French forces in the Levant.

Vichy government officials waited anxiously for further information regarding an ultimatum dispatched to Gen. Henri Dentz, French high commissioner for Syria, by the British commander, Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, demanding that Beirut be declared an open town and that French troops be evacuated from it by 5:30 a. m. today.

No information reached Vichy immediately regarding Dentz's reply to Wilson.

(Editor's Note: Jerusalem reported no reply had been received from Dentz up to noon today—six and a half hours after the ultimatum expired—and that hostilities in Syria accordingly were continuing.)

Meanwhile, a new communique issued by the government stated that the British so far have made no reply to the truce proposal originally advanced by Dentz on Tuesday.

Instead of replying to this proposal, the French announcement charged, the British intensified their attacks on all fronts in Syria.

Dentz Insulted
Furthermore, it was claimed, British agents at Beirut distributed papers impugning on the military honor and dignity of Gen. Dentz. The communique stated (Continued on Page Four)

STUBBORN SOVIET ARMY TO RECEIVE MORE SUPPLIES

WASHINGTON, July 10—American defense officials conceded today that Russia's stubborn resistance to German invaders is expected to accelerate the flow of strategic materials from the United States to the Soviet.

Conferences between Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles and Soviet Ambassador Constantin Oumanski during the last few days are paving the way for substantial Russian orders of American machinery, equipment and petroleum products.

While Welles and Oumanski were discussing the broad, diplomatic aspects of American aid to Russia, representatives of the Soviet's Amtorg Trading Corp., were working out detailed purchasing proposals with State Department experts. At the conclusion of these meetings, Welles reported that the program of supplying certain materials to Russia was proceeding rapidly and effectively.

The American government's disposition to speed shipment of important materials to Russia stems from the fact that the Soviet war machine may prove tougher to the Nazis than had been anticipated.

RUSSIAN VISITS F. D.

WASHINGTON, July 10—Soviet Ambassador Constantin Oumanski paid his first visit to the White House today since the outbreak of the Russo-German war.

Punishment For Hiking Men Defended By Lear

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 10—Lieut. Gen. Ben Lear, commander of the Second Army, today vigorously defended his action in punishing 350 men of the 35th Division for "yoo-hooing" and whistling at shorts-clad girls on a Memphis golf course.

Declaring that the punishment of compelling the men to retrace their route a second time, marching part of it afoot, was "neither severe nor unjust," Gen. Lear asserted that as long as he remained in command "soldierly standards of conduct will be demanded of all individuals in uniform."

Gen. Lear's defense was made in a telegram he sent Representative Paul Kilday (D) of Texas, who severely criticized the officer and called on him for an explanation. Representative Kilday is a member of the House Military Affairs Committee.

Gen. Lear said the soldiers' action "called for immediate and prompt action and under the circumstances I saw fit to take such action."

Gen. Lear previously denied that his order for disciplinary action was influenced by any remarks or taunts directed at him personally, as was suggested by Rep. Kilday.

"The remarks of the soldiers were not directed at me," Gen. Lear said. "They were directed at a group of girls and some men playing golf. Of course, none of the soldiers knew who I was."

One report of the incident said the soldiers, in addition to hailing the golf-playing girls from their truck convoy, shouted "get a caddy" and similar bits of advice in the direction of the general.

The "yoo-hoo" soldiers were forced to march 15 miles last Tuesday, besides making an extra trip in the trucks to Camp Robinson, Ark., 150 miles away.

GERMAN YOUTH WILLING TO FIGHT AGAINST KIN

DETROIT, July 10—William E. Bader, 22, whose father is a colonel in the German army, was enroute to Camp Grant, Ill., today following his induction into the United States army.

Bader, who has a half-brother in the Nazi air force, commented: "I'd hate to have to fight against my father and brother, but if I have to my adopted country comes first and I'll do it."

A chauffeur-butler for a Grosses Pointe family, Bader came to this country in 1927 with his mother who separated from her husband. He has since become an American citizen.

U.S. To Put 80,000 Men On Iceland

United Service Organization Says Facilities Will Be Prepared

NEW YORK, July 10—Revealing for the first time the number of American troops that will be sent to Iceland, the United Service Organizations today announced that they are making plans to provide recreational facilities for 80,000 soldiers. Richard W. Lawrence, city chairman of the USO, said the Canadian war services had agreed to cooperate in the move.

LONDON—After six devastating air raids, a Reuters (British) dispatch from Shanghai said today, the Chinese capital of Chungking is described as a "city of the dead."

LONDON—German raiders attacked two British coastal areas last night and early today. The Air Ministry said bombs were dropped on southeast Scotland, northern England and East Anglia but caused no casualties. Four German planes were shot down.

LONDON—The London Daily Sketch reported today that diplomatic relations between Moscow and the Belgian government-in-exile will be renewed shortly as a result of a meeting between Soviet Ambassador Ivan Malsky and the Belgian foreign minister in London.

LONDON—British military authorities said today that free French casualties in the Syrian campaign numbered between 1,200 and 1,300 men.

HELSINKI, July 10—The Finnish high command announced today that fighting planes and anti-aircraft batteries shot down 14 Russian planes during the night. Yesterday eight Finnish fighters contacted 17 Russian aircraft. Within 10 minutes, it was claimed, (Continued on Page Four)

U. S. TO REQUIRE 1,418,000 MEN BY NEXT APRIL

WASHINGTON, July 10—The OPM today moved to supply 1,418,000 additional workers that will be needed by National Defense industries by next April to meet requirements of the existing defense program.

Sidney Hillman, associate director-general of the OPM, who announced the need for the huge labor supply, said that 12 governmental agencies, concerned with the training and recruiting of defense labor have been coordinated into one group with the OPM labor division to see that the labor demands are met.

The OPM labor chieftain said that the task of supplying the defense labor will be headed by Arthur S. Flemming, a member of the Civil Service Commission.

The 1,418,000 workmen needed include 323,900 for shipbuilding and 408,441 for aircraft factories, Hillman said. The defense effort, directly and indirectly, will require between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000 additional employees by next fall, he stated.

'EMPTY' PISTOL KILLS STEUBENVILLE BOY, 15

STEUBENVILLE, July 10—Steubenville's second "empty gun death" within six weeks was recorded today with the accidental shooting of 15-year-old George Andrews. The youth was shot through the chest when a revolver in the hands of Pee Cizes, 17, accidentally discharged. The latter youth told officers he thought the gun was empty.

Red Says Strife Just Beginning

LONDON, July 10—Soviet parachute troops have been dropped on the outskirts of Helsinki in Finland, a broadcast picked up by Reuters agency said today.

MOSCOW, July 10—Destruction of an entire German motorized division on the Lepel sector of the front—the greatest victory yet claimed by the Red army in the Russo-German war—was announced by the Soviet high command today.

In the words of the Russian "Pravda" communique describing last night's activities:

"On the Lepel sector a German motorized division was wiped out."

According to the war bulletin the German motorized division that suffered annihilation included 40 guns, a large quantity of transport equipment and other "specialized machines."

Other successes were claimed for the Red armies up and down the huge battle line where violent fighting raged over many hundreds of miles.

On the Borisov sector, the communique said, enemy forces also suffered another "serious defeat."

Division Routed
An entire Nazi division was said to have been routed in the direction of Borisov, which lies roughly 60 miles south of Lepel where the motorized division met its doom.

Further north, on the Ostrov sector of the Estonian front, the communique said, all German attacks were repulsed with heavy losses.

Around Polodak, north of Lepel, Soviet forces were declared to be making "resolute counterattacks."

On the Novograd Volinsk battle front, where the German drive has been aimed at the Ukraine, all Nazi attacks were said to have been checked and still further south the enemy offensive on the Bessarabian front was described (Continued on Page Four)

FOUR BOYS HELD FOR EASTERN STATE POLICE

Four boys from York, Pennsylvania, were being held by police and sheriff's officers Thursday, pending their release to Pennsylvania officers.

The boys are Joe Strine, 16; Kenneth Rentzel, 16; Donald Stambaugh, 15 and Ronald Stambaugh, 14. Members of the Pennsylvania Motor Patrol informed local officers Thursday that all four of the boys were wanted in Pennsylvania for burglary.

Rentzel has been charged previously with writing a ransom note, Strine with auto larceny and Ronald Stambaugh with petit larceny. The youths were captured by local officers after they had aroused suspicion at the George Justus store on Route 22 east of Circleville. Justus phoned local officers who caught the youths as they drove into Circleville.

WAR DEPARTMENT PLANS DISPLAY OF EQUIPMENT

WASHINGTON, July 10—The War Department today promised to stage for members of congress a display of the nation's arms and man-power to demonstrate where at least part of the billions appropriated for defense during the last year have been spent. That was disclosed in a letter sent from Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, to Rep. Thom (D) Ohio, in which the army officer said the demonstration would be held near Washington.

REICH REPORTS NEW BATTLES

Nazis Doubling Efforts To Break Resistance On Stalin Line

BERLIN, July 10—"Vast new battles" have developed in several regions along the Stalin line in Russia, a German military spokesman announced today as the Nazis redoubled their drive to smash Red resistance.

"German strategy is developing irresistibly," the spokesman said. Reports that Germany has suffered heavy set-backs and sustained immense losses were flatly denied with the comment: "That's the same song we heard in other campaigns."

One of the largest of the fights raged on the Stalin line directly west of Moscow, where Russian military leaders have massed crack Soviet troops in a desperate gamble to retain a foothold in western Russia. German military authorities said the Russians have fallen into (Continued on Page Four)

ALL NIGHT RAID CARRIED ON BY RAF AIRPLANES

LONDON, July 10—Terrific explosions shook the English coast from midnight to dawn today as swarms of British bombers roared across the English Channel and gave the German-occupied French coast one of the heaviest pastings of the war.

The zone of operations apparently extended all the way from Boulogne to Dunkirk.

Residents of southeast English towns and even persons some distance inland were unable to sleep because of the inferno of crashing bombs across the water. They rose from bed and congregated on the cliff tops to watch the show.

While this shattering attack was in progress, other RAF planes attacked objectives at Aachen and Osmabruk in the Reich itself.

Since dawn this morning, with weather conditions ideal for flying, RAF fighters maintained a continuous patrol over the Straits of Dover.

MATURE DENIES HE AND BRIDE HAVING TROUBLE

HOLLYWOOD, July 10—Victor Mature, the 1941 version of a Broadway matinee idol, today denied reports that he and his bride of a few weeks, the former Martha Kemp, were on the verge of a separation. Close friends of the actor's, in Hollywood to make a picture, said that both Mature and his pretty wife, who is the widow of Hal Kemp, popular orchestra leader, appeared to be in disagreement, but Mature laughed at the stories. He said his wife, to whom he was married in New York several weeks ago, was due in Hollywood shortly.

WITH LOCAL BOYS UNDER THE FLAG

Private Leo W. Black Writes Of Life In Air Corps

Letters back home from boys who are serving in Uncle Sam's varied camps and branches of duty are always interesting. Following is one received from Private Leo W. Black, 74th Air Base, A. C. A. F. S., Luke Field, Phoenix, Arizona.

Here is the letter in part as written by Black:
"This Air Corps is really a busy place, and if you can't find plenty to do there sure must be something wrong. I read what Jack Foreman wrote home about being in the Air Corps and the closest he has been to a plane is about a mile. Well Jack is about right on that because I enlisted as a mechanic and have been in four months. Yet they have never said a word about me working on a plane, but I will soon get that chance if I still think I want to be a mechanic. I've been on so many jobs since then that I find it rather hard to make up my mind which I really want."

"When I was at Kelly Field, Texas, I spent about one month drilling in the hot sun, and it was so tough that sometimes I wished I had never seen or heard of the Army. As a rule the Air Corps doesn't have much drill, but our company commander had been an infantry officer before he came to the Air Corps, so we got plenty of drill."

Varied Jobs Held
"Another month was spent doing most any kind of work that came along, such as digging ditches, keeping the flying field in shape, even grubbing out weeds of thorn trees to make a landing field for our planes about 20 miles from camp. Even with all this we weren't neglected when it came to Kitchen Police duty. The first day I was on K. P. I had to wash dishes, but after a couple of days of it you get used to it. At least we can see that we got plenty to eat, even if we had to grab it when the cook had his back turned."

"June 10 the order came that our outfit was to get our things together to leave for Phoenix. That sounded swell to us, because any time there is traveling to do we are all ready no matter where we go."
"One of the fellows in my tent had a car, so four of us started out from San Antonio, Texas, to Phoenix, a trip of 1,027 miles. We were given plenty of time to make a nice trip of it, (five days), and we used it all."

"I never dreamed the west could be so beautiful. Mountains, deserts, lakes, anything you want is here, and we saw a little of it all."
"After we arrived at Phoenix at Luke Field we were sort of disappointed in the place. I honestly believe it to be the hottest and dirtiest place in Arizona. There was not a speck of grass in camp, and over the whole field about three inches of dust. The air currents coming down from the mountains make whirlwinds of dust."

DEMOCRATS ASK BRICKER TO CUT EXISTING TAXES

Harmony Gathering Held At Sawyer Farm Develops Campaign Idea

ALL FRICTION AT END
Patronage To Be Handled By Three Individuals Under Agreement

WILMINGTON, July 10 — The state Democratic organization today was called on by National Committeeman Charles Sawyer to "force" Governor Bricker to call a special session of the legislature to cut existing taxes and provide for a more equitable distribution of tax revenues.

At a peace conference of county leaders at Sawyer's nearby Bunker Hill farm, designed to heal rifts in the state Democratic ranks, Sawyer announced that the two major causes of discord, the questions of separate state headquarters and of federal patronage, had been settled.

Democratic National Chairman Edward J. Flynn, according to Sawyer, has approved a plan to clear all national patronage questions, other than those allotted to Democratic congressmen, through a three-member Ohio board composed of S. wyer, National Committeewoman Mildred H. Jaster of Cleveland, and State Central Committee Chairman Albert Horstman.

A conference between Horstman, Sawyer and J. Freer Bittinger, state executive committee chairman, resulted in a decision to combine the national committee's Ohio offices and the state party offices at a location agreed on mutually.

Tax Cuts Sought
Mapping his program for Democratic action in Ohio, Sawyer declared:

"The most effective action the Democrats could take at this time is to demand that the governor call a special session of the legislature before the end of the year to enact measures which will provide more equitable distribution of tax revenues and effect substantial tax reductions."

"In view of the enormous national defense spending program, there is no valid reason for the state's 'do-nothing' attitude toward a program of real economy in the state government—the kind of economy which would mean something to the taxpayers."

NEW TRACKLESS TANK URGED BY WAR SECRETARY

Stimson Wants To Start Purchases Despite High Cost

ORDNANCE UNIT OPPOSED

Cabinet Member Believes Vehicle Answer To Hitler's Speed

By Drew Pearson and Robert Allen

WASHINGTON, July 10—With Germany making its inroads on Russia largely through the use of tanks, Secretary of War Stimson has been giving a lot of thought to developing an American weapon which would stop what he calls the "German mastodon."

Also he has been having a hot row with some of his own ordnance people over the purchase of a new and trackless tank which Stimson thinks may be the answer. The chief of ordnance, General C. M. Weason, opposed purchase of the new tank as far too expensive.

However, General Benedict Crowell, assistant secretary of war during the World War I and now War Department adviser on material, went over Weason's head to Secretary Stimson himself.

"An eight-wheel tank has just been developed," General Crowell told Stimson, "that is a wonderful thing. It may be the answer to Germany. It has been turned down by Ordnance, but I think you ought to see it."

So Secretary Stimson went over to Ft. Meyer and saw it demonstrated, later sent it down to Ft. Knox to General A. R. Chaffee, Chief of the Armored Force. Then he went to Ft. Knox, personally, and conferred with General Chaffee, who was enthusiastic, wanted the Army to order seventeen tanks immediately. But Ordnance wanted to order two at the most, considered the price far too high.

Turned down Lewis Gun At this point Stimson harked back to the days when he was Secretary of War in the Taft Administration.

"There is always a balance to be attained between what the fighting forces want and what the War Department in Washington wants them to have," he explained to friends, "and the trouble with the Ordnance office is that it is so deluged with people who want to win the war with new inventions, that it gets rather callous."

However, the last time I yielded to the Ordnance office in a matter like this was when I was Secretary of War under President Taft—and regretted it. The Ordnance people had turned down the Lewis machine-gun. General Crozier a very dear friend of mine, was opposed to it. I went behind the barracks and shot the gun, but in the end I bowed to General Crozier and the Army passed it up.

"Well the world now knows what became of the Lewis machine-gun. The next time I saw it, I was in a British airplane over the English Channel in the last war, and the pilot was using a Lewis machine-gun against the enemy. The British had bought the patent and perfected it."

Aim More Deadly So last week Stimson decided not to make the same mistake with the trackless tank. At Ft. Knox pictures were taken from inside the tank, looking out through a gun-hole, and it was proved that the eight wheels made the tank far smoother and thus more deadly in its aim. Also Stimson figured that it would take four to five months anyway to build two tanks, and seventeen could be built in the same period. So in the end he said: "To hell with Ordnance," and overruled General Weason.

Note—The original $58,000 price of the trackless tank, considered exorbitant, finally was reduced to about $35,000. Assistant Secretary of War McCloy, who handled the negotiations with Ordnance, got into a veritable hair-pulling contest with them, but he was only reflecting Secretary Stimson's views.

An American observer says "Hitler is spreading his armies out too much for his own good." We hope so.

"The Gentleman from Indiana"

"THE WILD MOB'S MILLION FEET"
A famous—or infamous—case is about to be settled. Because members of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers unlawfully seized the plant of the Apex Hosiery Company in Philadelphia and destroyed thousands of dollars worth of machinery the Union has now agreed to pay, in settlement of damages, the tidy sum of $110,000.

And because the public authorities of Philadelphia failed to protect the property from mob rule and civil war, the City will now pay the additional sum of $15,000. Every taxpayer in Philadelphia must now pay a higher tax because its mayor or police chief did not have nerve enough to enforce law and order.

Perhaps this is too harsh. It may be no political alliance existed whereby labor racketeers bought immunity from the law, either with money or votes. Perhaps the reason city, county and state authorities did nothing was because Washington, D. C., had taken over labor relations and therefore Philadelphia piously washed her hands and delivered Apex to the mob. Nevertheless the fact remains that for failure to enforce the law it is Philadelphia and not Washington, D. C., that is now paying $15,000 in settlement of damages. This ought to be a warning to the citizens of all cities. Apathy toward mob violence pays few dividends.

There are important angles to this case. According to the United States Supreme Court the Apex Manufacturing Company in April 1937 was employing 2500 persons making hosiery in a non-union shop. The American Federation of Hosiery Workers demanded a closed shop.

I here underline a remarkable fact. When this demand was made only 8 Apex employees out of 2500 belonged to the union; 2492 did not belong to the union! Nevertheless a strike was called by this tiny minority. Members of the union from other factories forcibly took possession. The locks on all gates were changed. Only strikers were given keys. No one was permitted to enter unless he had a pass from strike leaders.

Possession was held against the owners and managers from May 6 to June 23, a period of seven weeks. On account of vandalism to machinery the plant could not resume operations until August 19th.

So for three and a half months 2492 workers were denied the right to work by 8 union members together with their hoodlum allies from the outside. Whether the 2492, or some of them approved the strike I do not know. My guess is that many "went along" simply to avoid the terrorism to which they saw the factory subjected. If so, they ought now to join in a lawsuit against the union and the city of Philadelphia, for their lost wages.

As the Supreme Court said, this was "a lawless invasion of petitioner's plant and destruction of its property by force and violence of the most brutal and wanton character, under leadership and direction of the union, and without interference from local authorities."

The judge might have added "without interference from federal authorities." Madame Perkins and Assistant Attorney General Robert Jackson, soon now to be a Supreme Court Justice, did not interfere. No one interfered. No one but the mob.

In the plant at the time of the sit-down were 134,000 dozens of finished hosiery, worth $800,000 ready to be shipped to customers in interstate commerce. The company asked of the strikers the privilege of entering the plant to ship these goods. The poor privilege of entering their own plant to ship their own goods was denied.

Believing this constituted interference with interstate commerce the company brought suit against the striking union for damages under the Sherman anti-trust law. Our reorganized United States Supreme Court held that despite the admitted lawlessness the union was not liable. The only law, it said, that had been violated was local law against trespass to property. So the Apex Company filed a second suit in the state courts and it is this suit which is now being settled by the union and the city of Philadelphia by paying a total of $125,000.

However, three members of the Supreme Court—Chief Justice Hughes, McReynolds, and Roberts, were unable to agree with their New Deal brethren that "a direct and intentional obstruction of the shipment of goods in interstate commerce is not a violation of the Sherman Act."

But Hughes and McReynolds have now left our highest Court and presumably it now contains but one judge, Roberts, who believes the owners of property in a case like Apex, have any rights under federal law when a mob seizes power. Perhaps this is unjust to Senator Byrnes. But what are two against seven?

HISSES GREEN BETTER THAN COLLEAGUE

NEW YORK, July 10—Scattered hisses and boos from spectators at LaGuardia Airport today marked the departure of Dr. Hans Borchers, ousted German consul in New York, as he boarded a plane for San Francisco.

The Nazi diplomat, whose office suspended operations as a result of the federal order closing all axis consulates in the U. S., was accompanied by his wife, Adelaide, and his personal maid, Ellen Verhoff.

Dr. Borchers is reliably reported bound for a new diplomatic post in Shanghai. It is believed that in San Francisco he plans to join a Nazi group headed by Capt. Fritz Weidemann which is sailing Sunday for Japan.

SEARCH GOES ON FOR ARMED MEN ON WEST COAST
Authorities at Stockton, Cal., are continuing their search for two bandits who abducted and terrorized Paul Ashbrook, 21, and his fiancée Miss Katherine Dietz, 21, during an 80 mile ride early this week.

The Ashbrook youth's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Ashbrook of San Francisco, were visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. May, Circleville, when the crime was committed.

The only clue found so far has been the story of a Lodi, Cal., farmer, who said he had seen two men speeding through Lodi Monday night in a green car the description of which matched the one stolen from Ashbrook. The youth and Miss Dietz were left bound in a Stockton cemetery.

One of the bandits has been identified as Carl Westover, 23-year-old desperado.

THREE CABINET OFFICIALS ASK ACTION BY NAVY

and free from all hostile activity and threat thereof."

Knox, in particular, called attention to the President's declaration that: "As commander-in-chief I have consequently issued orders to the Navy that all necessary steps be taken to insure the safety of communications in the approaches between Iceland and the United States as well as on the seas between the United States and other strategic outposts."

Declining to say specifically that the Navy would fire on German war planes or submarines, Knox nevertheless said that the phrase "all necessary steps" left "no room for any doubt as to what it embraced."

Importance Recognized

Mr. Roosevelt himself has always maintained that the Azores and Cape Verde Islands are among the "island outposts of the new world." In his May 27 Fireside Chat, he said that the Nazis have the "armed power at any moment to occupy Spain and Portugal and that threat extends — to the island outposts of the new world—the Azores and Cape Verde Islands." He pointed out that the Cape Verde Islands were "only seven hours distance from Brazil" by plane and "dominate shipping routes to and from the South Atlantic."

Piracy Charged

On Capitol Hill, prevailing opinion—even among non-interventionists—anticipates an early U. S. move toward the Azores and Cape Verde Islands. Some time ago, rumors prevailed that the U. S. asked Portugal to permit occupation of both island groups but that the Portuguese government indignantly refused, declaring it was in no danger whatever of Nazi aggression. Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, (D) Mont., non-intervention leader, who first tipped off the nation of the U. S. move to occupy Iceland, said:

"Now that we have taken over Iceland, I understand the next thing contemplated is to seize Cape Verde and the Azores. We have got as much right to take these islands as we have to take over Ireland or Sicily. If carried to its logical conclusion, this idea of national defense would place no limit on our aggression. We now operate on the same basis of piracy followed by Hitler."

a German trap and now are being "pounded to pieces."

At all other points along the front, German authorities said, huge pincers are being drawn around the Soviet forces.

They declared the avowed goal of the German high command is to "annihilate the foe within convenient communication distance rather than conquer vast spaces of territory in a hurry."

Russia, they predicted, will "fall like a ripe plum" once the Red armies are driven back to the Urals.

Because of the vastness of the operations, they said, the high command will continue to maintain secrecy regarding details of the fighting for the next few days to prevent important information from reaching the Russians.

But it was claimed to full power of the Nazi blitz machine has now been unleashed to "administer a knockout blow to the already punched Reds."

This maneuver was said to be moving forward on a grand scale over a front roughly 1,000 miles long.

German planes, these quarters declared, are carrying out incessant bombing and raiding attacks over this entire area.

FUGITIVE FROM MANSFIELD HELD FOR BURGLARY

Thursday morning and called police.

Marshall told investigating officers he had burned his reformatory clothes and had stolen the garments he was wearing from clothes lines in various towns in which he stopped.

Authorities at Mansfield were notified of Marshall's capture, and officers were uncertain whether charges of breaking and entering would be filed against him or whether he would be returned to Mansfield.

Prior to his escape ten days ago, Marshall had been at Mansfield ten months on burglary and larceny charges.

CAMP MEETING AT STOUTSVILLE OPENS JULY 22

United Brethren Leaders
Plan Big Conference
Lasting To Aug. 3

REV. WHITWELL TO TALK

Persons In Charge Of Young
Peoples' Work, Music
Announced

United Brethren Church leaders have selected July 22 to August 3 as dates for their annual camp meeting at the Stoutsville Campground.

The Rev. L. Spurgeon Metzler
of the Pickaway U. B. Circuit, who is secretary of the Campground Association, said Thursday that the Rev. Dewey Whit-well, D. D., of Nashville, Tenn., and the Rev. Porter E. Wright,
D. D., of Lancaster, district superintendent, would serve as evangelists. The Rev. Mr. Wright is a former Circleville pastor. The Rev.
Mr. Whitwell is widely known among United Brethren Church members in Ohio, having appeared in this district several times.

The camp will be opened Tuesday, July 22, with an address by the Rev. Mr. Whitwell.

Music this year will be provided by the Kutch Sisters of Lebanon, Pa.

The Rev. Mr. Metzler said that the Rev. Lena Houdeshell would be in charge of youth work during the camp meeting, and that
Mrs. Marx and Mrs. Eskew of Lancaster would handle children's work.

NEW SING SING WARDEN NEVER SAW EXECUTION

OSSINING, N. Y., July 10—

Robert J. Kirby, 51-year-old successor to Lewis E. Lawes as warden of Sing Sing prison, today arrived to take over his new job —and to admit in his 27 years of penal work that he never witnessed an execution.

Kirby, who like Lawes is opposed to capital punishment, and regards executions as "gruesome," is required in his new post to supervise and watch Sing Sing's electrocutions. During his 21 years as warden, Lawes witnessed 303 executions.

ASHVILLE

By S. D. Fridley
Ashville, Phone 79

In our perambulations through the alleys of Ashville recently we passed the property of ex-Mayor Fraunfelder and wife who reside at 81 Powell Street and saw one of the most pleasing sights in our experience. They have about twenty White Rock pullets and cockerels largely of the female persuation which they purchased from Jimmy Woodworth, who reared them from day-old-chicks in the parsonage basement. These chicks were hatched February 12, 1941. The present owners came into possession of this flock May 3, at which time they averaged two pounds each and at the present time they will tip the scales at 3½ to 6 pounds. And to make the record better one of the pullets laid her first egg Wednesday of this week.

While we are on this subject our memory reverts back to the period when Ashville had one of the best small poultry shows in central Ohio attracting some leading breeders from many miles around. This exhibition was in the heyday of its success around the year 1918, staging a show during the extremely freezing weather of the week following. Fraunfelder was secretary of the association for a number of years and C. C.
Cloud was superintendent of the shows. Mr. Fraunfelder has always raised White Rocks and at that time had a strain that always brought home the blue ribbon.

Prior to the organization of the local Poultry Association the poultry flocks around Ashville were mongrel in type—Duke's Mixture
—but soon considerable attention was paid the humble hen until you found pure or standard bred fowls wherever poultry was raised. The worth to the community was immense. However since we have no poultry organization we likewise do not have the farmer interest.

For the best interest of farmers and raisers of small flocks we can imagine no one thing that will bring the poultry industry back where it belongs with large and small flocks uniform, pleasing to the eye and remuneration to the pocket book, than a reorganization of a poultry association within our midst. We did it twenty years ago—we can do it again.
Who will start the ball rolling?

The pea pack at the Crites Milling Company factory closed Saturday, June 28, after having been in operation since May 30. At the peak of operations 160 persons were on the payroll. The quality of the pack was exceptionally good while the yield was low, the late drought reducing the crop perceptibly. Especially was this noticeable in the late sweet varieties which was estimated at one-third crop. The complete output 1941 pea pack was 41,000 cases or 984,000 cans and the company's reputation for dependable canned goods is proven as only about 17,000 or 18,000 cases remain in stock. The corn pack, of the yellow variety, is expected to open about the last week in July, depending largely on the weather.

The local business men are sponsoring a band concert by the
V. F. W. 60-piece organization of Circleville, Ohio, made up of the best musicians in the surrounding community and directed by Fred
J. Hines in down town Ashville, Saturday at 8:30 p. m. This will be a musical treat you can't afford to miss and the home town will leave no stone unturned to extend the visitors a most cordial welcome while our guests.

Washington Merry-Go- Round

In the campaign against France,
U. S. military experts estimated that the Germans used about 700-000 horses to bring up infantry, field kitchens, hospitals, food, guns, ammunition and all the other vast paraphernalia of war.

NAZIS LEARNED FROM CIRCUS

Inability to organize transportation is one of the Russian army's greatest defects — especially so while transport trains, airports, railroad trains and switch yards are being bombed ceaselessly from the air. Also the Russians have no genius whatsoever for repair.
Trucks and tanks will get out of kilter and the Russians simply abandon them on the roadside. The Nazis, in contrast, will be on hand with traveling garages and repair the stalled equipment immediately.

So this war, spread over very long distances, may be won by the army which has the best organized transportation.

Note—The Nazis learned the art of quick transportation by coming to the United States and studying the American circus—probably the greatest development of the technique of quick unloading, hauling and repairing.

MERRY-GO-ROUND
The White House is the oldest federal building in Washington.
Designed by James Hoban, an Ir-ishman living in Charleston, S. C., the mansion was completed in 1800 and the first President to occupy it was John Adams. . . It was originally called the "President's Palace" by L'Enfant, French engineer who laid out the Capital. President Theodore Roosevelt was the first to designate it officially as the White House. In an executive order issued October 21, 1901, . . .
Assistant Secretary of Commerce
Robert Hinckley was responsible for the dispatch of the group of crack airplane mechanics to Britain to familiarize the RAF with the repair and maintenance of U. S.-made planes. During his visit to Britain, Hinckley was struck by the need for such a crew and within a week after his return, arranged to send one. . . State Employment officials who balk at cooperating with federal authorities in procuring defense workers are headed for a surprise. With funds provided for this purpose by Congress, the U. S. Employment Service is preparing to disregard the obstructive state officials and set up separate employment offices.

U. S. FATIGUE PILLS

Those mysterious anti-fatigue pills fed German soldiers before going into battle are nothing new to the U. S. Army. In fact, U. S. nutrition experts have gone the Germans one better.

The Nazi pill is simply a tablet made of a mixture of corn sugar and citric acid. The acid causes a flow of saliva which in turn promotes quick digestion of the corn sugar, giving the soldier a "lift" within a few minutes after the pill is swallowed.

U. S. Army experts have developed a much improved version, known as Type D super-emergency ration. It consists of a concentrated chocolate bar fortified with vitamin B. The bar weighs one ounce, can be carried in the soldier's pocket and will withstand

PRISON REFORMER

THE resignation of Lewis E. Lawes as warden of Sing Sing is of interest to many persons beyond the confines of the country's most famous prison. Lawes has been warden there for a little over 21 years. He wants to retire from that "seven-day week, 24-hour job" while he is still young enough to enjoy some other opportunities, such as writing, lecturing and doing radio work.

Opposed to capital punishment, he has nevertheless supervised more executions than any other man in the United States. He is known to most Americans because of his writings and radio work and particularly because of his efforts to make prison a place of rehabilitation and reform rather than punishment alone.

Persons engaged in such a constructive fight seem sometimes to be losing it. The total number of prisons and the prison population in the United States continue to increase from year to year. One type of crime may decline, but others gain.

There is much confusion in the public mind about parole for prisoners and "coddling" and prison reform. Sometimes these services are hampered by politics and graft and then there is an outcry against them. Yet even persons who think they do not believe in prison reform would hardly want to return to the extreme penal practices of an earlier time. Also, if given half a chance to make good, a great many prisoners do so. Society, it should not be forgotten, is benefited when this happens quite so much as the convicts themselves.

EDUCATION

AN educator says that in spite of the changes in school programs nowadays, and the larger and more varied subjects taught, the three R's are still being stressed as much as ever.

This may be true enough as far as writing and arithmetic are concerned. In the latter field, especially, an old-timer is often astonished at the grasp of mathematics shown by modern students. But as for reading, and the spelling that presumably goes with it, the proficiency of this generation is open to question.

It's appalling, how much misspelling and mispronunciation a person can run across nowadays if he looks and listens around. And then in the matter of grammar, which is more or less related to the three R's, a lot of young high school graduates certainly give an impression that the old rules have gone. Sentence construction often seems as free as the air. Boys and girls are inclined to "speak right on," letting the words fall where they may.

People who always insist on "doing what they think is right" can make an awful lot of trouble.

With all this armoring, it's just as well for private citizens not to catch the fever and start toting guns.

That Syrian business begins to look serious.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

—By—
Charles P. Stewart

The war of the isolationists against the ex-Republican, ex-Army colonel, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox probably won't reach the shooting stage, even if the Navy itself has accidentally on purpose already taken a shot or two at the Nazis.

When the congressmen, however, get Colonel Knox on the spot for a little questioning by the Senate Naval Affairs Committee on just what has been going on in the Atlantic, they may do a little shouting about the amazing log which the genial secretary with the Sunny Jim grin has written on his shakedown cruises into the uncharted seas of oratory and his test flights in trial balloons.

His record of war-like utterances, climaxed by his most recent and most amazing statement that the U. S. Navy should "clear the Atlantic of the German menace," has left Washington gasping. There is a little talk of impeachment, but that's wild, too. The

net score to date is that not once has Secretary Knox had to use parachute or life preserver to get back to the safe harbor of his desk, from which base he just grins broadly, saying nothing, or at the most, "No comment."

HE WON'T TALK

What about those men up on the hill who want his scalp? "No comment!" Did the President okay his speeches?

"No comment!" "Is he going to resign?" "I'll let you write your own answer to that."

The answer is that he is not going to resign at all. They'll have to torpedo him out of the job. He loves it. And he has been shipwrecked out on a limb, and had his bow ties fired across before. He is still running an unscheduled race with cotton-mouthed Senator Claude E. Pepper of Tallahassee, Fla., as to who

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN

PARTIES EYE WILLKIE

WASHINGTON — The 1942 political rumba is still a long way off, but the politicians already have begun to cast their eyes over possible candidates. One of their chief topics of discussion is the governorship of New York.

Herbert Lehman, thrice Governor of the Empire State, is certain not to run again. This creates a wide open situation for a prize considered a stepping stone to the 1944 presidential contest. Remember that Franklin Roosevelt went from the Executive Mansion in Albany to the White House in 1932.

A number of hopefuls are known to be ready to try their luck, chief among them Republican Tom Dewey and Democratic Lieutenant Governor Charles Poletti. Dewey came near beating Lehman in 1938 and his yen for the presidency is undiminished. As Governor of New York, he would have the inside track for another shot at this ambition. Poletti is a political protege of Lehman and was selected as runningmate on his insistence.

But the most interesting possibility being mentioned in inner political circles is Wendell Willkie.

Particularly significant is that this talk is coming from Democrats as well as Republicans. These Democrats are not the party bolters who supported Willkie against Roosevelt last year. They are men who fought Willkie bitterly then, but now feel differently because of his outspoken stand against isolationism and appeasement.

Convinced that this issue will dominate the 1942 elections, these Democrats already are discussing the possibility of starting a boom for Willkie as a fusion candidate for Governor.

NOTE—Willkie has not been approached on the idea, has given no intimation even to close friends that he is interested. But the idea is in the air, and, as proved in 1940, anything can happen in politics.

GERMANY vs. RUSSIA

One of the key factors in gauging the Russo-German war is that the Germans are marveled at transportation; the Russians are not.

As long as the Red Army can force the Nazis to fight a diggin-in, slow type of warfare, Hitler's forces are up against it. But when ever Nazi mechanized columns are out ahead, dodging through Russian wheat fields, then even if they sometimes get cut off from their own forces, the advantage is very much with Germany.

So far, the Nazis have employed exactly the same tactics they used so successfully in France, cutting through enemy lines with one mechanized spearhead, then widening that spearhead with infantry.

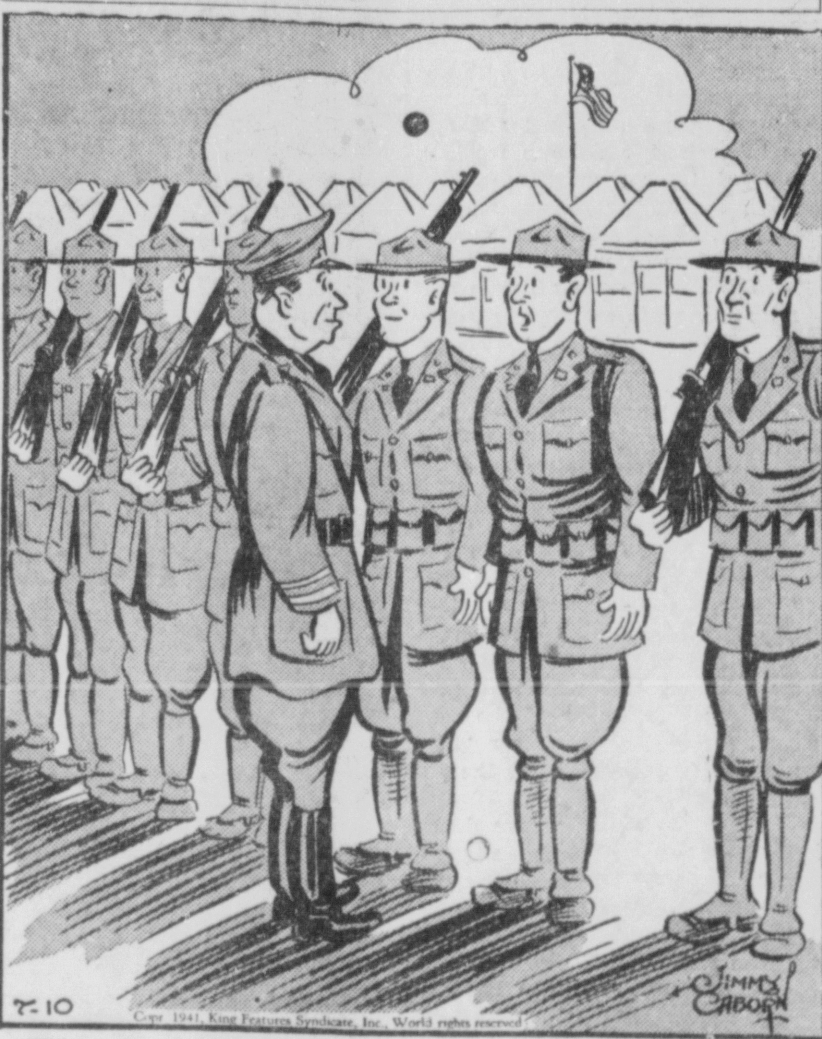

This use of infantry is one tactic of the German army which most people have not realized. For although the shock attacks have been accomplished by tanks and heavily armored troops, Germany's great military genius has been the ability to bring up horse-drawn infantry immediately and widen the gap made by the panzers. DIET AND HEALTH

Errors Often Cause Baby Stomach Upsets

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

● Young mothers are confronted with no more worrisome problem than having the baby lose its meals regularly by vomiting. An occasional vomiting spell is to be expected.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

pected and does no harm, but when it gets to be a regular habit, it is a real cause for concern.

Looking over the histories of a series of such cases, one is struck by the frequent changes of food and formulae. This is perfectly natural, since the anxious mother is at her wit's end to find something that will agree with the baby.

It is probable that the changes are sometimes the cause of the condition, and upset the baby more than if a single routine formula were followed. The type of food given is not so often the cause of habitual vomiting in babies as some other factors, however.

Air Swallowing

One common cause that is not considered often enough by the mother is air swallowing. This is due to improper technique of feeding—improperly shaped nipples on the feeding bottles or nipples with the holes too large or too small, or failure to remove the nipple from the baby's mouth often enough, or feeding with the baby lying on its back, or the use of pacifiers, or finger sucking.

Too frequent feeding may also be a cause. Babies should not be fed often than every three hours.

Still another mistake is too much food. The baby may regurgitate or actually vomit simply because it is overloaded with food. The food of the vomiting baby, however, should not be diluted. It requires a more concentrated formula with less water.

Food Formulas

The faults that are found in the food formulas themselves are usually that they are too rich in cream. This invariably causes vomiting in some children. Spoilage of food due to improper refrigeration may have to be considered. Both of these problems may be met by changing to a dried milk preparation and preparation of individual feedings.

Tough curds may be noticed in the vomitus and might be a cause. They can generally be overcome by boiling the cow's milk formula or adding lactic acid to the formula or using evaporated milk.

The possibility of an obstruction to the outlet of the stomach which occurs in young children and causes persistent vomiting from birth is known to every physician. But this is a rare condition and, besides, the vomiting is continuous, which is not exactly the problem we are considering here. Severe constipation may be a cause. It can be relieved by correcting the formula or by the use of mineral oil.

D. H. D.:—"Is there anything serious in having little white spots on the lips?"

Answer: No. The condition is known as Stielwagon's disease and is simply a thickening of the openings of the little ducts of the glands that lubricate the mucous membrane.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. CHAPTER FORTY-TWO

STANLEY KING nervously wiped his brow with a silk handkerchief. "There were deputy sheriffs on the old tunnel road near my place, apparently hunting for the murderer," he explained. "I sent my gardener to them to report the shot."

"Nobody reported to me," the sheriff declared. "Could you tell, from the sound, where the gunman stood?"

"Close by the window," King paled at the memory. "The explosion almost deafened me!"

The sheriff frowned. "And he missed you? We'll take a look at the place. Maybe in daylight we'll find footprints or an empty cartridge."

"Why do you have to go to my house to hunt the killer?" King demanded, breathing heavily. "You know that the only men who could have killed John Ives must be in this room!" He looked at Henry. The little clerk felt a chill crawl along his back.

From the rear of the room John Jones approached the three men and Marcia in time to hear the last remark. "That's right," Jones agreed. "The man who killed John Ives must be in this room. I have a test I wish to propose, if Henry Potter's test has failed."

Marcia drew in her breath sharply. "Why—has Henry been testing us?"

King scoffed, almost sneering. "Any test Henry would propose would be bound to fail—unless Henry took the test himself!"

"What I propose to do," said Jones, "is to run this new locomotive around the track directly behind one of those that was in the crash the night Ives was found dead. I know this one hasn't been touched since it came from the factory. I'm curious to see if there is any difference in operation."

The sheriff grunted. "What will that prove?" "I'm already about convinced that Potter is guilty."

"If there is a difference in operation it will prove that someone tampered with the locomotives that were used that night."

The sheriff shrugged. "Go ahead. Play with your trains if you want to. I'm going to King's house." As he walked to the door he added significantly, "My men are still around the building—within earshot—if you need help. Coming, Mr. King? And you—Potter—don't try to get away!"

The banker nodded. "If you're leaving, so am I. I'll feel safer out of Henry Potter's company. I still think you ought to lock him up."

"I'm going with you, too! Marcia announced.

As soon as they were alone the insurance man turned to Henry. "I wouldn't worry about him too much. Seems to be an excitable type. It'll blow over."

"He—he's liable to talk the sheriff into hanging me!"

"Forget it! It's obvious you're not the type to be a murderer. Let's try out this locomotive. By the way, where's Susan Baker?"

"I don't know. I'll ask Laurence." Henry went to the young farmer where he stood in a corner of the room by himself. He was started to see that Laurence's eyes, supposedly helping him in adjusting scenery, were in reality fixed on Spinnell with a burning glare of hatred.

"Laurence!" The young man started. "Oh, hello, Henry!"

"What's wrong?"

"Nothing's wrong."

"Why didn't Susan come to the meeting today?"

Laurence flushed. His eyes snapped to Spinnell again, then dropped to his work. "She said she didn't want to."

"You—you think quite a lot of her, don't you?"

Laurence looked up and regarded Henry steadily. His face was white. When he spoke his voice was low and strained. "You've guessed it, Henry. I might as well tell you everything. I've got to tell someone! I think—too much—of her. That's all I can do! I can't get her out of my mind!"

"But you . . ."

"Yes, I know. I'm married. Perhaps if my wife had come to these club meetings . . ."

"He turned to the scenery and adjusted a tree so savagely he broke it."

"Women are peculiar," Henry observed. "How do you know your wife doesn't love you just as much as though she did come with you? Mine bosses me around. She does everything but swear at me. And last night she darn near fainted when she thought I was hurt! She fell down and cried. I—I never thought she really cared so much."

"But you don't understand," said Laurence. "It's not my wife. It's Susan! I just can't stay away from her. I tried to stay away from meetings. I couldn't. I had to come. And every time I saw her it was worse. She seemed to encourage me."

"His voice dropped to a whisper. "Now—now she tells me she's in love with Spinnell!"

John Jones called to them from the other side of the room. "Come over here, you two. We're ready to start the trains."

Pete Simmons, the only first tim-

er, was gazing in awe at the lineup of locomotives in the miniature railroad terminal. Henry had to admit that the streamliner set on the tracks by Jones added a dash of attractive color, but he was thinking more of what Laurence had said. Henry looked at Spinnell and couldn't imagine him and Susan as a match. The girl, he guessed, had used that method of discouraging the young farmer's unwanted attentions.

"All set!" announced Jones, with the proud air of a small boy showing off his newest toy. "Hans, you operate the control board. Take one locomotive after another out on the track and put them through every maneuver possible. We'll compare their performance."

Hans ducked under the table and through the hidden door into the control room. The lights dimmed, although the night effect was dispelled by the faint glow from one cellar window that had not been covered by the canvas scenery.

One of the locomotives that had been in the wreck the night Ives was killed moved out on the main line. Except for a broken cowcatcher it seemed as good as ever. The tiny wheels, which because every thing else was in scale gave the effect of mighty drivers, gathered speed as sparks snapped under them. Signal lights turned red behind it as it clicked over the rail joints toward the model mountains to the west. Around the curve it took a turnout onto another line. Behind it the streamliner came to life as signals turned to green. A moment later the third locomotive, a freight hog, rolled across the yard switches and picked up momentum down the main.

"G-gosh!" stuttered the taxi driver, "I'll have to tell Joe about this!"

Jones was frowning. He watched each locomotive as it went around the loop, crossing from track to track so that eventually they all went through the same performance.

"How about it?" asked Spinnell. "I don't see anything unusual."

Jones shook his head. "Neither do I. That destroys the alibi they might have built up for Henry."

Henry started. "You—you don't mean you're going to take sides with Mr. King against me?"

"I'm sorry," said the insurance man. "If these locomotives weren't tampered with it wasn't necessary for the murderer to have attended any of the previous meetings of the railroad club. He might not have been a member of the club—as you are not, Henry."

Today's Horoscope

Prospects for those of you who have birthdays today are bright indeed. You will experience financial gains, unique and happy social activity and gaiety. These felicitous events, however, may be accompanied by extravagance and high expenditures, it is feared. For the child who is born on this date, it is prognosticated that he or she will be very fortunate in business and love, and a long, happy life is foreseen. A tendency to be too lavish should be suppressed.

Daniel Brobsts Observe Golden Wedding July 16

Family Dinner To Be Served Next Sunday

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Brobst of 108 South Pickaway Street, who will celebrate their Golden Wedding Anniversary, Wednesday, July 16, will be honored at a family dinner Sunday at their home. The affair is being arranged by their daughter, Miss Ethel Brobst, of the home, their two sons, Floyd and Robert, and their wives of Washington Township. Brothers and sisters of Mr. and Mrs. Brobst, their wives and husbands will be guests at the anniversary dinner in addition to the children of their sons.

Miss Daisy Murray of East High Street who was a guest at the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Brobst will be a guest also at the dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Brobst were married July 16, 1891, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Hall of Circleville with the Rev. M. J. Myers, a pastor of the English Lutheran Church, performing the ceremony. Mrs. Brobst is the former Myrtle Rector, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Rector of Wayne Township.

Mr. and Mrs. Brobst have lived in Pickaway County during their entire married life, residing on their farm in Washington Township until removing to the South Pickaway Street home about six years ago.

Open house, for which no formal invitations have been issued, will be held at the Brobst home Wednesday, July 16, when friends and relatives will be received from 2 until 4 in the afternoon and from 7 until 9 in the evening.

Ebenezer Social Circle

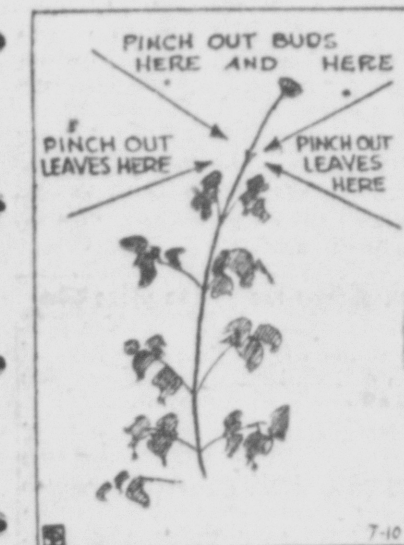

A delightful program arranged by Mrs. Marvin Dreisbach was enjoyed by members of the Ebenezer Social Circle Wednesday at the home of Mrs. C. O. Kerns of West Union Street. Miss Polly Jane Kerns played a lovely medley of familiar songs for her first number with "The Norwegian Cradle-Song" for a second. Little Donna Jean Kerns played one piano number, an interesting quiz arranged by Mrs. Dreisbach closing the entertainment.

Mrs. Charles Dreisbach, president, was in the chair for the short business session and conducted the devotions, reading Psalms 235 and 236. It was decided to have the next meeting, Wednesday, August 13, at Gold Cliff.

Today's Garden-Graph

Disbudding to Obtain Display Dahlias

If you are planning to exhibit your dahlias this fall in a dahlia show, they should be disbudded this month.

As shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph, when growing the large flowered varieties, each stem should be allowed to develop but one flower. The buds grow in a cluster of three, and this means that the two poorest ones should be pinched out. Go down the stalk and take off the two sets of leaves just below the bud. By thus disbudding you will have a strong, long stem with one extra large flower, because it has gotten the nourishment which otherwise would have gone to the two other buds. Only five stems should be left on each plant.

During the hot days of late summer keep the leaf hopper away from dahlias by spraying them with pyrethrum or tobacco dust.

CLASSIFICATIONS OF 45 MARRIED MEN CHANGED

SERVICE BOARD OFFICIALS CITE NEW DECISIONS

Registrants Who Wed Before Date For Signing Up Cited As Having Dependents

LAW NOT GENERAL ONE

Serial Numbers Assigned To 21-Year-Old Who Signed Up For Service

Pursuant to recent rulings from National Headquarters on the status of married men, the local draft board Wednesday night reopened and reconsidered classifications of 50 men and transferred all but five of them from 1-A and 1-B classifications to 3-A.

The new rulings in effect make marriage prior to the registration date a presumption of dependency. However, if a registrant has been married since the date he registered, it is incumbent on him to prove that his marriage was not an attempt to evade induction under the Selective Service Act.

In such cases the local board may request written evidence to substantiate any claim of dependency by reason of marriage.

Of the fifty men reconsidered by the board, ten had been definitely placed in 1-A and 15 tentatively in 1-A pending physical examination. Fifteen were in class 1-B as qualified for limited military service.

Notices of changes in their classification will be mailed to the registrants immediately, local draft officials said.

Instructions from National Headquarters have informed local board members that the "newly-married registrant has the same general right to deferment as any other married registrant," providing he can prove he has not married to evade induction. The local board also has been informed that "any reasonable doubt in connection with dependency should be resolved in favor of deferment."

Not Automatic
The new ruling on married men does not mean, however, local draft officials pointed out, that every married registrant is entitled to a 3-A classification or to deferment from the class in which he has been placed. It merely means that his case may be reopened by the board.

During Wednesday night's session the local board serial numbered the county's 142 new registrants. Names of the 21-year-olds were shuffled and drawn at random, serial numbers being given in the sequence in which they were drawn.

The new list of 21-year-olds will be held by the local board until the national lottery on July 17. Following the national lottery, the registrants will be ordered numbered according to the sequence in which their serial numbers were drawn in Washington.

The 21-year-old men who registered for Selective Service on July 1 will be integrated for induction among previous registrants with order numbers larger than the last inductee of their local board.

Rather than to place these youthful new registrants ahead of after the older registrants on their local board lists, it has been decided to integrate them proportionately, Brig. Gen. Lewis B.

Lawes Retires

LEWIS E. LAWES, 57, above, warden of Sing Sing prison, Ossining, N. Y., has submitted his resignation. In good health, Lawes said his desire was to retire from such a strenuous post while he still is "physically and mentally vigorous." He plans to write, lecture and may go into radio and movie work.

Hershey, Deputy Director of Selective Service, stated.

Example Listed

For example, General Hershey said, if there should happen to be 10 new registrants in an area and 100 old registrants awaiting call, one new registrant would be placed after each group of 10 old registrants. The serial numbers in the order they are drawn in the lottery will constitute a master list to be used by local boards in assigning "Sequence Numbers" to their July 1st registrants, in this manner:

The registrant in each local board area whose serial number appears at the top or nearest the top of this second master list will be given "Sequence Number 1" in his area; the registrant whose serial number is next closest to the top will receive "Sequence Number 2," and so on until each July 1st registrant has a sequence number.

As was the procedure in connection with the previous national lottery in October 1940, local boards will cross off on the second master list and ignore those serial numbers that are not held by any registrant in their areas.

When sequence numbers have been assigned to all new registrants, the local boards will assign each of these registrants an order number to be determined by integrating them among the old registrants. This means that the new registrant with Sequence No. 1 in his local board area will receive the lowest order number assigned to his group, and the registrant with the largest sequence number will receive the highest order number for the same group.

HUSBAND JAILED IN SHOOTING OF ESTRANGED WIFE

DALLAS, Tex., July 10.—The Dallas County grand jury was to hear testimony today about the bedroom slaying of Mrs. Laura Jackson, 35, wife of Robert A. Jackson, a chemical salesman.

Jackson is under a charge of murder. Mrs. Jackson was shot and killed, her companion, Victor Briggs, 26, was shot twice in the chest last night. His condition was said at a hospital to be serious.

The shooting occurred in a bedroom of Briggs' apartment. Briggs said he was awakened by a flash of light in his face, and was shot immediately. Officers believed Mrs. Jackson was shot as she slept. Jackson surrendered to officers, but declined to discuss the matter. It was learned that he and his wife were estranged and he had been in California. He returned to Dallas a few days ago.

Briggs and his wife had been separated for several weeks.

Early discovery of a fire at the William Harrington residence on East Franklin Street Wednesday night at 8:15 prevented possible serious damage.
